

Night of the Nameless

During the 1973-74 school year, Sanderson students began assuming the more carefree attitude which would prevail during the second half of the decade. Students became involved in a variety of after-school activities, activities as diverse as the PTA Open House and the Halloween festivity termed the "Night of the Nameless." Spring and fall concerts by the music department were joined by such exciting events as a Variety Show and a Sophomore Carnival. Disregarding the terrible acoustics of the girls' gym, Sanderson's drama club produced two excellent plays, Harvey and The Crucible, for the students. Sanderson students also displayed their talents to all of Raleigh through booths at Crabtree during National Education Week and a spring art exhibit also held at Crabtree. Thus during 1973-74 Sanderson students withdrew their energy from the protest movements, and instead threw it into enjoyable extracurricular activities.

LAKONIKOS

The big event of 1975 at Sanderson was the emergence of the phenomenon of dance. Until this year, the Student Council had lost money on every dance held at Sanderson except for the 1973-74 Sock Hop. However, during 1975 students crowded into the gym for every dance at Sanderson — dances such as the newly-reinstated Winter Festival. In fact, almost 10 times as many students attended the Prom in 1975 as had attended in 1972. What caused this sudden interest in dance? Perhaps it emerged because the acid rock of Jimi Hendrix had been replaced by the more rhythmic beat of beach music and rock 'n roll, or perhaps it was initiated by nostalgia for the sock hops of the '50's caused by characters like Fonzie and Richard Cunningham. Whatever the cause, the interest in dance continued throughout the summer and is still going strong in 1978.

DO YOU WANNA DANCE?

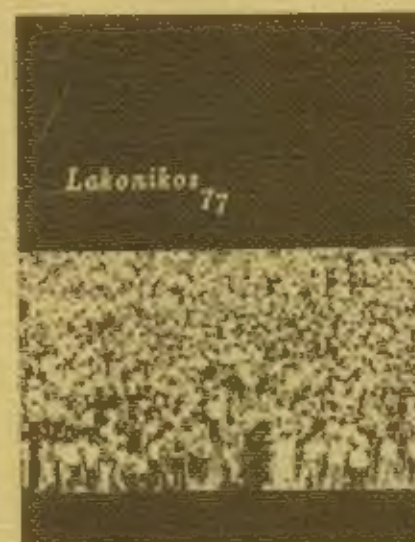

A Brush With the Law

The Bicentennial Year brought a flurry of controversy to Sanderson. Pitched battles between factions on the student council were reminiscent of the events in Philadelphia two centuries earlier. After the vandalism of the Homecoming activities, Watergate was replayed through the abortive attempt at the impeachment of the Student Council President. Controversy continued throughout the year as an underground newspaper paid belated and final homage to the moribund '60's. Altruism found its way into the Sanderson student body through the first annual Red Cross Blood Drive, and it became obvious that students would do anything to miss class. The administration made a last perfunctory attempt to restrict the student body to the campus, but the long accepted actual open campus brought about the long sought legal open campus at the beginning of the next year.

The Spirit of '76 gave way rapidly to the placidity of '77 as a new era of Sanderson life dawned with a sustained yawn. The impetus of the activist '60's had apparently breathed its last with the final hurrah of the Bicentennial. The demise of intra-school spirit so prevalent only a year before became glaringly evident in the conspicuous absence of the Junior-Senior Olympics. The Powderpuff football game was even reduced from the traditional class struggle to a half-hearted battle between the thoroughly integrated "Blue" and "Red" teams. The miniscule amount of intra-school spirit still in existence manifested itself in the antics of the infamous (and only partly anonymous) "Senior Paint Team," which decorated the trailers, back parking lot, and neighborhood roads with garish red "'77's." The "'77's" have now given away to "'78's," and the story of that year begins beyond these covers —

Appropriately enough, since it was Sanderson's tenth year in operation, 1977-78 was one of the most exciting and active years the school had ever seen. With such varied events as Homecoming, the Masquerade Dance, American Education Week, the Winter Festival, the Prom, Donkey Basketball, and Graduation, nearly every student could find some activity to excite his interest.

Sure Shots and Misfires . . . 33

Most Sanderson teams had superlative seasons this year, as proven by the fact that we won the All-Sports trophy. A Spartan win over the Cary Imps in football started off the year well. Other highlights included excellent seasons in all the girl's sports, a nationally recognized wrestler, and a state championship in soccer.

Organized Madness . . . 79

Sanderson's clubs and organizations were especially active this year, sponsoring such varied events as a Tree Spree, a Language Club food-tasting, the Language Olympics, Donkey Basketball, a Red Cross Blood Drive, and myriad assemblies and dances. Also, nearly all the choral and instrumental groups were recognized throughout the state for their abundance of talent.

Mentors and Tormentors . . . 111

Sanderson continued its tradition of academic excellence this year, as demonstrated by the fact that five juniors were selected to attend Governor's School this summer and that among the scholarships won by Sanderson seniors were two Morehead scholarships, a Pogue scholarship, a Carswell scholarship, and fourteen National Merit scholarships.

In Retrospect . . . 153

School spirit flourished during Sanderson's tenth year in operation. School pens, mugs, and pencils were sold, and at long last both a school flag and words to the school fight song were created. Assemblies were held nearly every month, and for the first time in years the complete student body attended each assembly. Happy tenth birthday, Sanderson!

Rank and File . . . 173

Inter-class rivalry also thrived at Sanderson this year. Besides such traditional rivalries as the Powderpuff game (which the underclassmen won) and competition in the magazine sale (which the seniors won), a new form of competition arose — "Shirt Wars." The superior seniors were victorious both in this battle and in the battle for supremacy of the sidewalk.

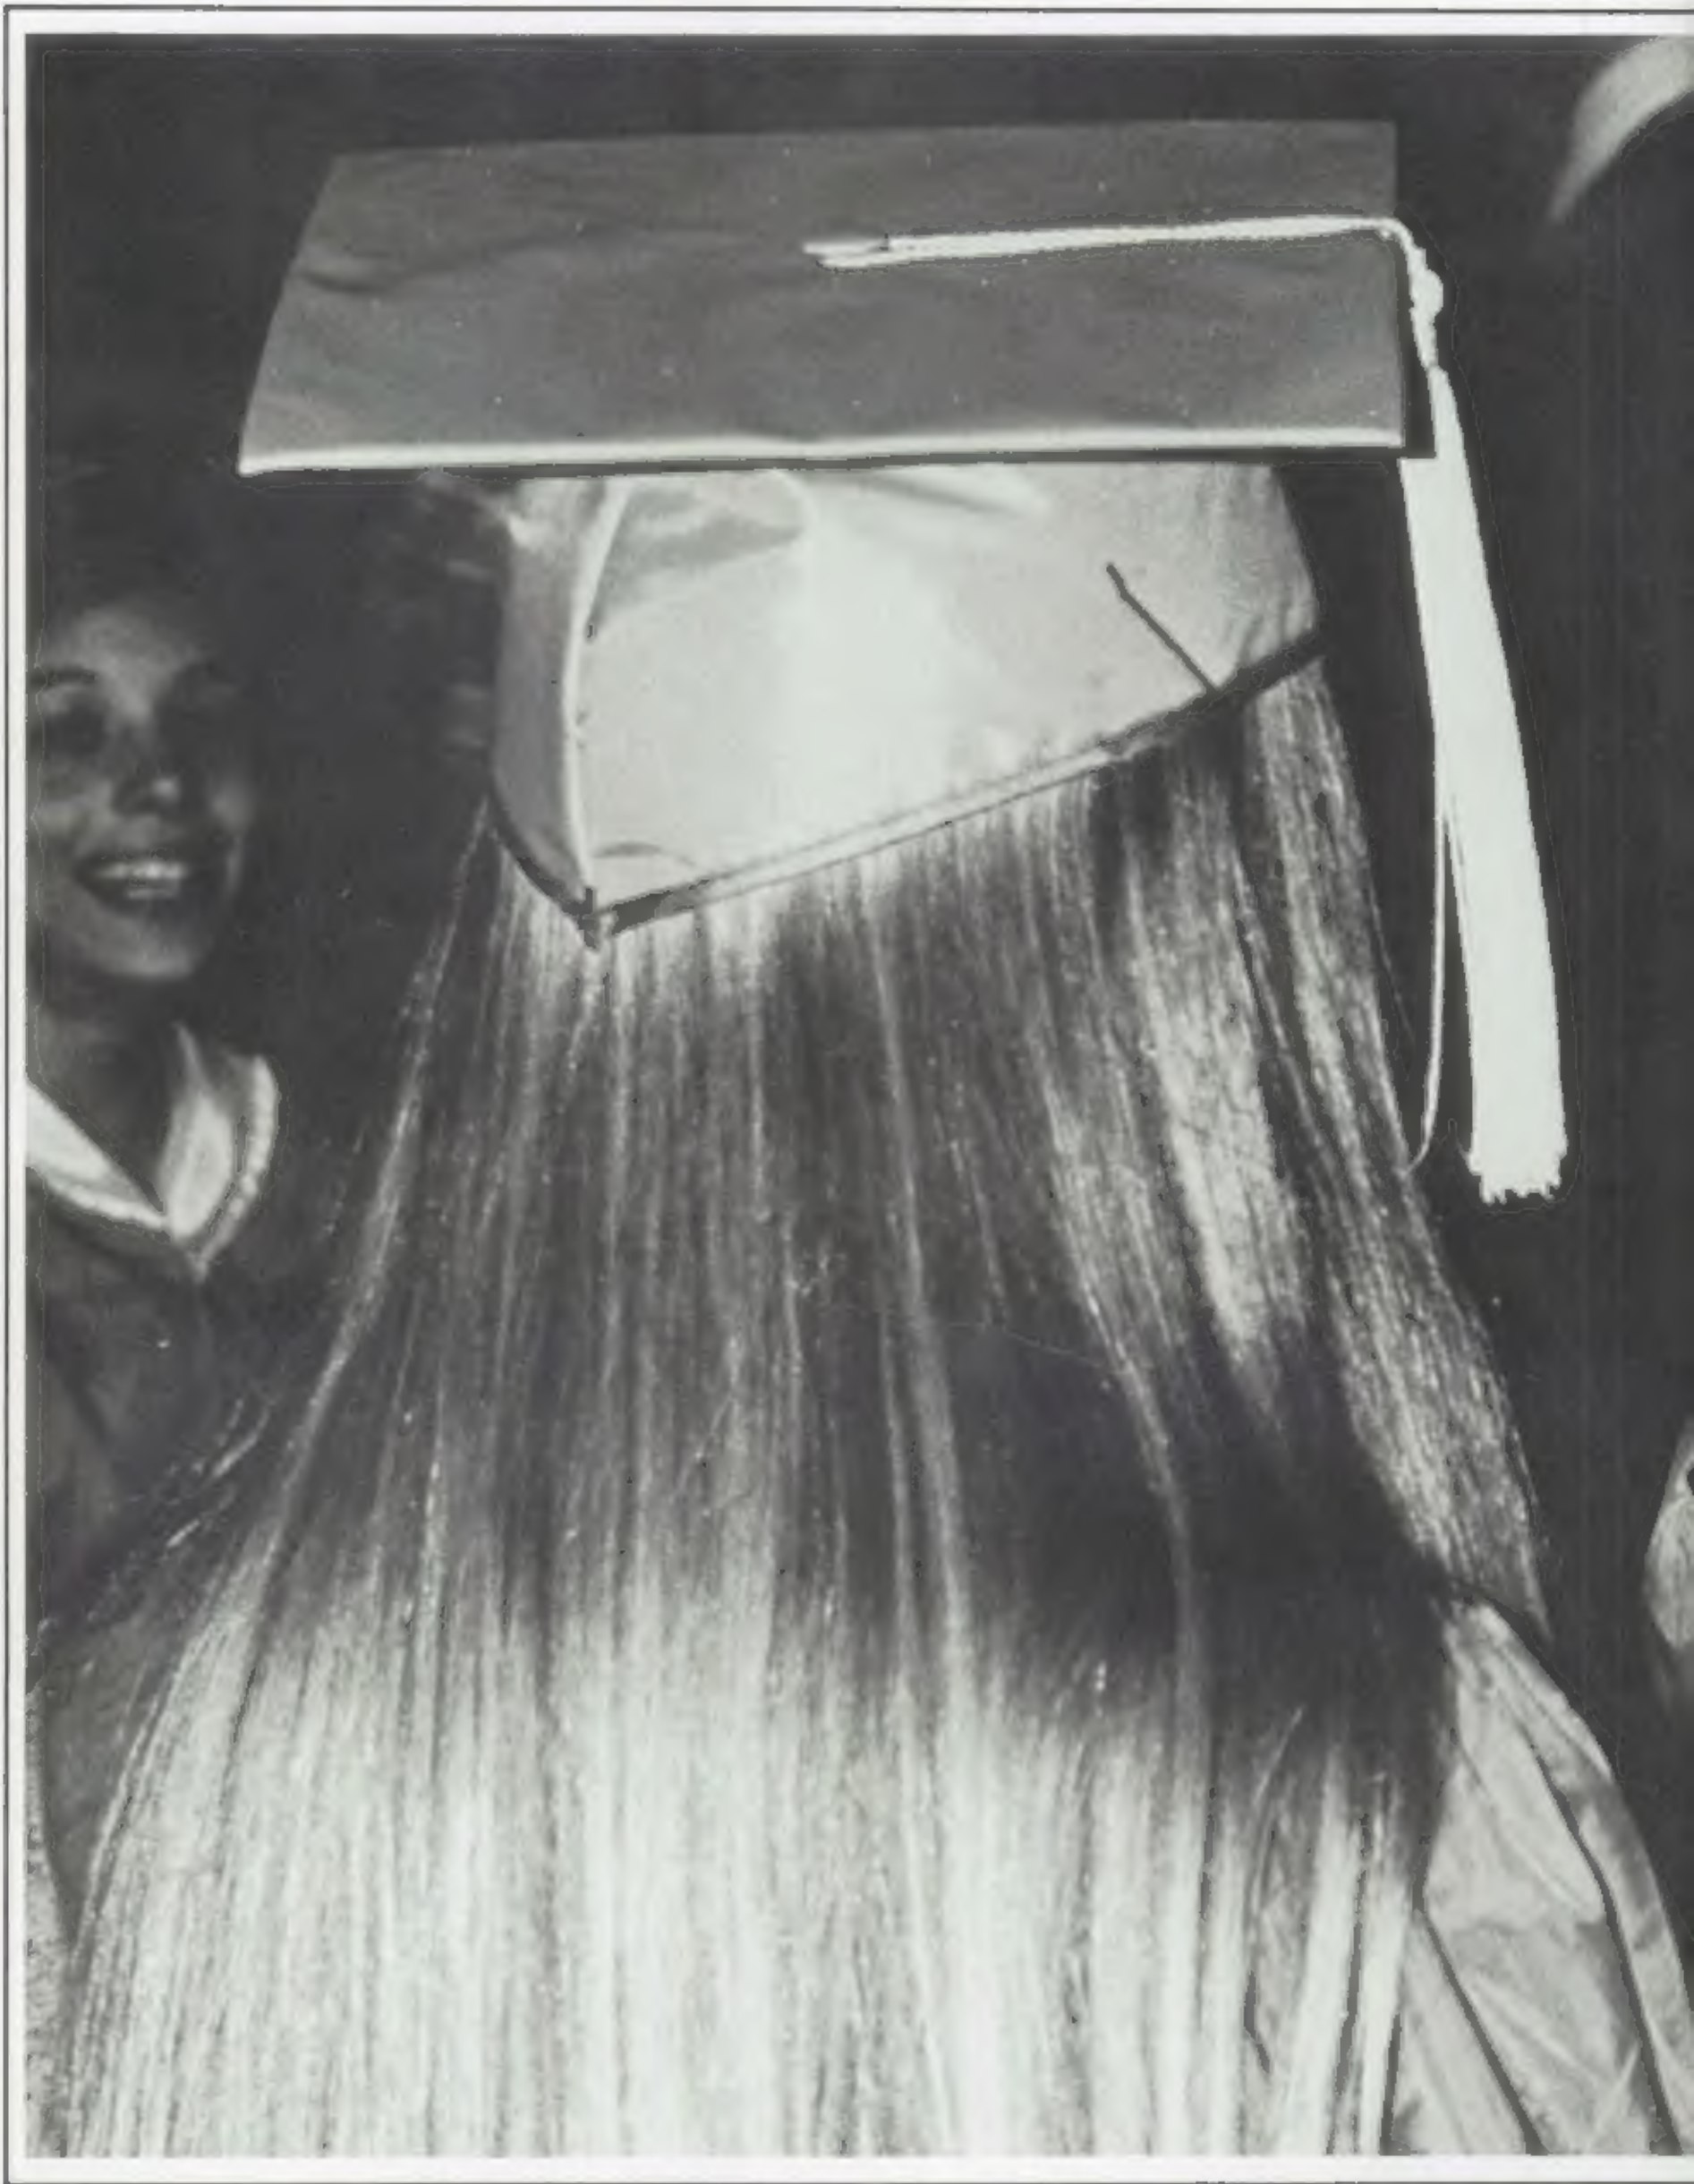

A Matter of Money . . . 241

As though afraid it would burn holes in their pockets, Sanderson students rushed to spend their paychecks at various Raleigh establishments. Fast-food franchises were most often the beneficiaries of student spending, especially during the lunch hours and before games (but, as you will notice, few of these chains would return the favor by buying an advertisement in your yearbook!).

Homecoming

The reinstatement of class floats to the traditional Homecoming Week Festivities brought about a revival of class competition which manifested itself in "shirt wars." The seniors, ever un-humble, won the consequent battle for bigger and better shirts (simply because the juniors and sophomores sold a combined total of about thirteen) but lost the battle of fingernails and ponytails in an unprecedented and highly controversial underclass powderpuff victory. The fact that misinformation to the seniors from the referees allowed the underclassmen to recover their own opening kickoff and score immediately inflamed tempers as did the mysterious erasure of five crucial minutes from the clock during the second half when the seniors were about to score and win. The eighteen dozen eggs purchased by some of the senior girls after the game did little to relieve tensions.

The week-long celebration climaxed Friday night when, after the Homecoming Court and floats had paraded around Gregson stadium, the unified Spartan machine trounced Enloe 14 to 0. The prevailing spirit after the game was so exuberant that happy Spartans overlooked a very mediocre acid rock band to salvage the dance and finish Homecoming Week.

Masquerade Dance

Soon Halloween neared and we looked at our smaller brothers and sisters with twinges of envy as they excitedly collected their ghoulish costumes. Trying to think of some way we could celebrate the night while maintaining our image as "mature" high school students, we hit upon the perfect solution — a masquerade dance! As always, several vampires, witches, and nameless beasts were seen among the crowds bobbing to the "haunting" beat of the disco music. However, just as when we were smaller, there was a select group of people who refused to be just another sheet in the crowd. Their costumes usually consisted of walking fantasies such as a Christmas tree or a human crayon. Far from stopping at a toy soldier, their original creations included remnants of the '50's and a wide variety of scampering mice. When the dance finally ended, all agreed that it had been a most bewitching way to spend that night of fright!!

American Education Week

Sanderson's tenth birthday party as a celebration of American Education Week was a controversy in itself seemingly students and faculty could not concur about whether or not it was SHS's birthday at all. The week's activities included the annual door decorating contest and teacher appreciation day as well as a teacher baby picture contest. On Thursday a carnival almost fit to rival the state fair was held complete with games booths, a flea market, and a barbeque dinner. For after-dinner entertainment the Junior Class Council sponsored a Gong Show which featured both serious and ludicrous displays of students' many talents

The Birthday Assembly on Friday wrapped up the week as the entire student body was brought together in the gym for the first time. Following slides of younger (and less harried?) Mr. Braggs and Mr. Murrays and a riotous explanation of Sanderson's notorious birth, Sanderson students watched in surprise as a huge birthday cake with ten giant candles was wheeled into the darkened gym. The following emotional ovation by the student body was Sanderson's first real show of student spirit and unity in years.

Winter Festival

After the usual furor resulting when girls have to get a date for a semi-formal dance, this year's Winter Festival ran smoothly and elegantly. As a return to pre-anti-Establishment sentiments (when charm and popularity were not considered obscene), a Winter Festival Court was elected and Queen crowned. The evening began with dinner at the "Barn" or other posh area restaurants where girls were subjected to questions about wine-selection, tipping and do-I-have-enough money. It ended later at the dance where Olde London decorations to the theme of A Christmas Carol rounded out the evening and sent everyone home happy and maybe a bit relieved

Prom

After much confusion, date-changing, band-swapping, and price-fixing, thanks to the school board and a cold front that moved down from Ohio and stayed, the annual Junior-Senior Prom finally got off the ground at Raleigh's new civic center. Following the rise in popularity of dances in general (and The Prom in particular) that has occurred in recent years, enough promgoers enjoyed the night of revelry to make the prom an actual moneymaker for the junior class (despite the fact that the average bill for the night was $100 per couple). Having posed for myriad pictures for parents before departing, couples spent a leisurely two to three hours feasting on steak or cheesecake at the "Barn" or "Seth Jones." Arriving at the civic center fashionably late, promgoers danced to the music of "Function" surrounded by decorations (with a theme of "Crystal Illusions") catered by the civic center. Reluctant to return home after the dance ended, couples attended various parties and breakfasts before finally calling it a night.

Cheerleaders, clowns, the game

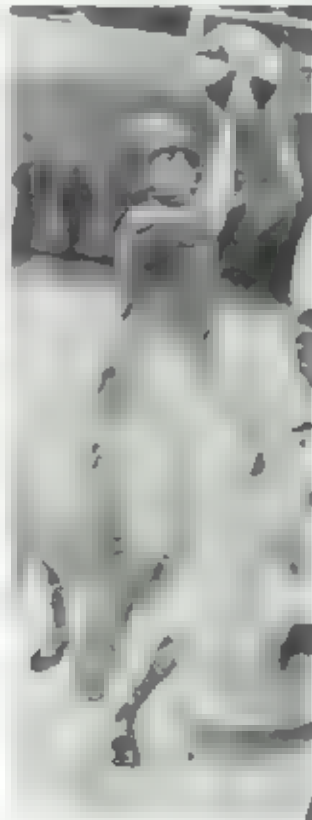

Donkeyball

Considering how hastily the plans for the event were made, the Donkey basketball game was an overwhelming success. In three hard-fought contests, the students (all seniors) battled, and eventually overcame, the male faculty. However, the student-faculty confrontation was the superficial contest; the actual combat was between man and donkey. Although some donkeys ran happily up and down the court or conveniently parked themselves under the appropriate basket, the majority of the donkeys seemed to enjoy most either throwing their riders or refusing to move so that they had to be literally dragged down court.

The females at Sanderson were not to be left out of the act. While the women faculty members demonstrated the degree to which their cheerleading skills had deteriorated since high school days, the female students entertained the crowds with cheers which one would normally expect to hear at a Smithfield-Selma game. From time to time, the entire game came to a halt as clowns, manned with shovels, dust pans, and brooms, scurried onto the court to clean up the donkey's "leftovers." Also, such games as "musical donkeys" enlivened the half-times and gave gymnasts like Janet Hamilton an opportunity to use their vaulting abilities in unusual ways. Although the packed gymnasium was disappointed to see the fun end, the donkeys (and many of the participants) were undoubtedly happy to have their ordeal over.

Graduation

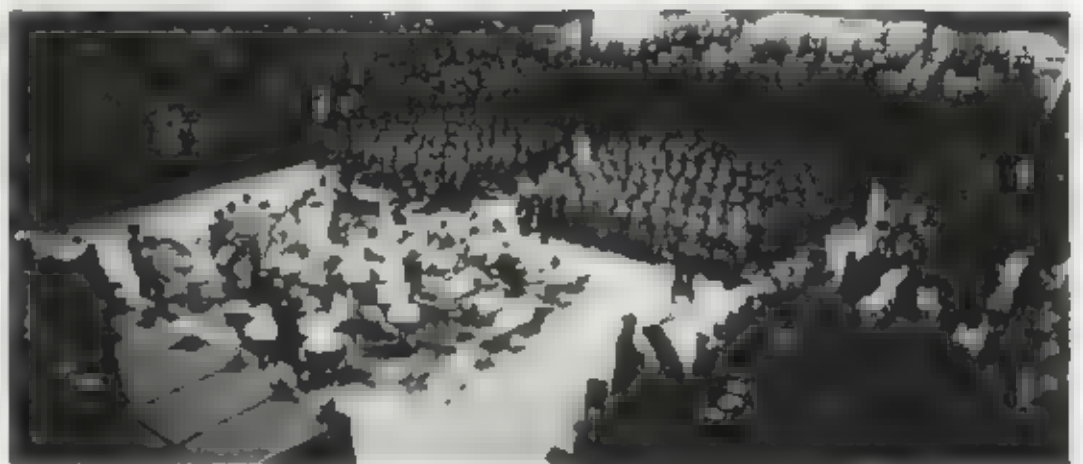

Speaking of the end of ordeals — soon that biggest ordeal of all — high school — would end for some 500 seniors. As that final week approached, the seniors became more and more on edge, and with the specter of final exams finally lifted from our heads, we were able to become totally immersed in the activities of the week. Although the week's activities began on Friday, June 2, with the Awards Assembly and Baccalaureate line-up practice, the realization that the final week was truly under way did not hit us until Sunday afternoon as we entered the Raleigh Civic Center auditorium to the strains of "Pomp and Circumstance" while a sizeable crowd proudly looked on. However, having been admonished by U.S. Senator Robert Morgan to think of our poorer world neighbors, we gladly escaped what by then seemed to be an oven set on "broil" to celebrate our freedom at parties featuring ice cream or barbequed pig (among other things). Fortunately, allowed to skip school on Monday and Tuesday due to the fact that the underclassmen were reviewing for and taking exams, we returned to the school Tuesday evening to attend a Class Night that could certainly have been improved by a little more planning.

Graduation Class Night

The week's events continued on Wednesday morning at the Senior Assembly when we first felt awe at the awards won by our fellow classmates then were brought to both laughter and tears by a slide show and by the sorrowful strains of the Sandpipers. Later, we ambled over to the stadium to devour hamburgers and hot dogs under the threat of rain while the underclassmen returned to their rooms to suffer through exams.

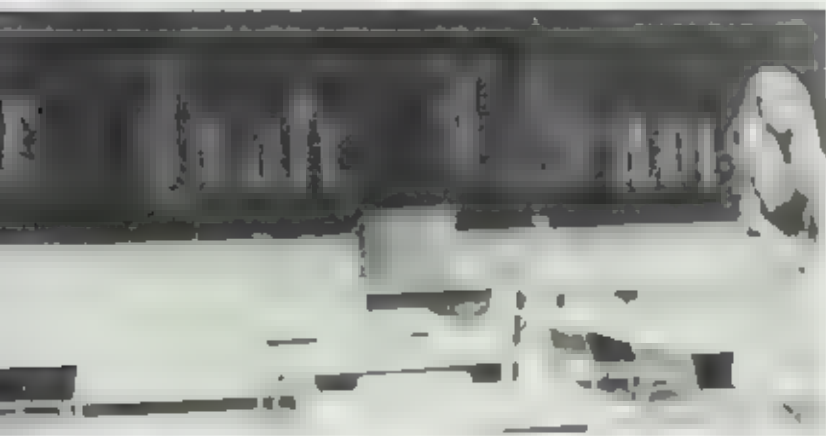

Finally the big day dawned as we sleepily strove to stay awake while attending Graduation line-up practice at Reynold's Coliseum. Two hours later we emerged to spend the rest of the day partying, rewriting our speeches, and ironing our gowns for the commencement ceremony. We arrived at Reynold's at 7 o'clock amidst a torrential downpour, and then nervously paced the halls until, at 8:20, we proudly marched into the coliseum while thousands of friends and relatives respectfully stood for us. After listening to speeches by the top three students, we each had our brief moment of glory on stage as we received that piece of paper which seemed so small but which symbolized so much. Then three and a half hours after we first arrived we left the coliseum probably looking no different, perhaps feeling no different, but knowing we in fact were different for we now possessed the long sought-after title of "High School Graduate."

Track is very easily compared to life in my case; one big hurdle which I can't seem to get over.
— Matt Gocke

rack provides me with the opportunity to display my natural abilities of which no one else could compare to. I am the greatest!
— Doug Lilley

Coach Wyatt Currin had the tough responsibility of grouping this year's team due to the temporary absence of Coach Turk Wright. His enthusiasm and complete dedication to track provided the team with a strong feeling of unity. The hard work that he has generously contributed was deeply appreciated by this year's track members. — The '78 Track Team rack requires a strong determination coupled with a tough, rigid training schedule for the serious trackster to be successful.

— Jim Flournoy

Anyone who can drive an afternoon bus route and afterwards put in countless grueling hours on the track, must really be an extraordinarily talented athlete!
— Tom Reddin and Matt Gocke

Track is a sport that draws from the inner self. Without a love for the sport, one could never endure the long, brutal miles it takes to be a winner.
— Tim Shea

Track and field is a unique sport because it is so individualistic. The only determination of how well you do is by how hard you work. I think that the success of this year's team was due to the strong leadership provided by the weight men in aspect of dedication and 110% effort. I think the girls' team also helped us to a successful year, adding a totally new meaning to the phrase "broad jump."

— Chip Akers.

rack consists of individuals striving for the team. We are treated as a second-rate sport. Hardly anybody ever comes out to cheer us on.

It's great having our meets with the boys because they offer a lot of support and really encourage and compliment us. There is no competition within our team because we accept each other so well and no one tries to be the best. There is a lot of competition between schools because we want to be best. (We are!)
— Susan Fetzer

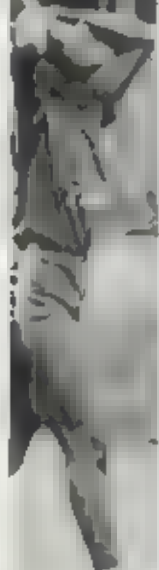

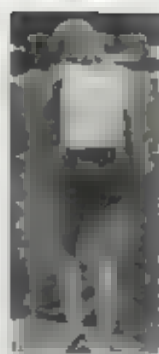

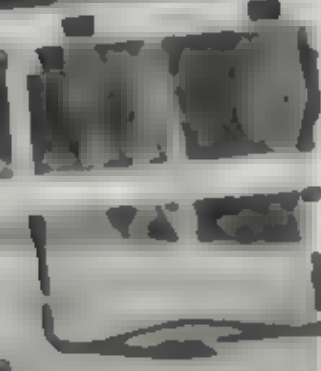

he team is great! We don't have many, but we're a team. We work together and we're close friends. This is the first girls' track team at Sanderson. We practice and have meets at the same time the guys do. We have a good time messing around. Coach Lewis is hard but she's just like one of the team. We didn't go all the way to the top, but we're proud of ourselves! We need more support!

— Sondra Childers

We had a great year overall and it was lots of fun.
— Debbie Nutter

track

here is a disadvantage in this being the first year of girls' track, but that is true in anything you do for the first time. Within our team there is competition, but not with the other girls on the team. We are constantly trying to improve ourselves and beat our own times. Points may be individual, but spirit and the togetherness is certainly team. The girls pull for each other and each tries to do the best she can. There is much competition with other schools and we enjoy competing.

When I joined the golf team after the season had started, I really didn't know what to expect. But playing golf for Sanderson is like playing for fun; everyone jokes around a lot.
— Mark Sturble

olf at SHS has been successful this year because we have a lot of players who play all the time; other schools aren't in that position. Although the student body doesn't give us much recognition, we don't let it bother us because we know we're great!

oftball was really fun this year. I just wish we could have gotten our stuff together better. We shouldn't have lost most of the games we lost. We'd get an early lead but then we'd make enough errors to blow it. Oh well, I hope the team has better luck next year.

ORGANIZED MADNESS

Students' clubs and organizations were especially active this year, sponsoring such varied events as The School Language Club and tasting the language. Typists, Dancers, Basketball, Red Cross, Book Drive and try out assemblies and dances. Also, nearly all the choral and instrumental groups were recognized throughout the state for their abundance of talent.

MENTORS AND TORMENTORS

Sanderson continued its tradition of academic excellence this year, as demonstrated by the fact that five juniors were selected to attend Governors School this summer and that among the scholarships won by Sanderson seniors were two Morehead scholarships, a Pogue scholarship, a Answe scholarship, and fourteen National Merit scholarships.

Nick Morrison: Having English seventh period is as refreshing as a hail storm after a day on the burning plain

John Corey: In Calculus and Physics, I feel that the very essence of my creative soul is sterilized; my English and History courses are the only periods in which I truly am allowed to think freely

David Bass: My candidate for most interesting class would have to be Mr. Booker's Learn to Hate American Writers course, otherwise known as American Masters. Faulkner is no master!

Mrs. Janet Alford

Mr. Charles Leckie

Mrs. Robert Cook

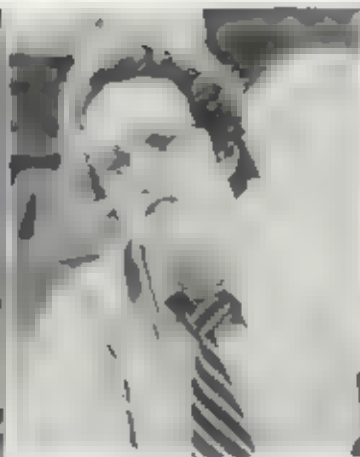

Mrs. Jewell Love

Mrs. Kristin Harris

Miss Peggy Moore

Mr. Charles Lehman

Mrs. Vera Hoscheiser

Mrs. Barbara Henderson

Khalid Mustafa: I didn't have to read Dante's Inferno to find out I was going to Hell!

Brent Jayes: As we were reading Dante's Inferno I could picture at least one Sanderson teacher in each circle of Hell

Sarah Sharp: I wear my sunglasses in Booker's class because his passion is glaring when he speaks of Billy Budd!

Mrs. Maryanne

Mrs. Lisa Reed

Mrs. Dorothy Reed

Mrs. Betty Rogers

Mrs. Patricia Sargent

Mrs. Beverly McClain

Mr. Michael Talley

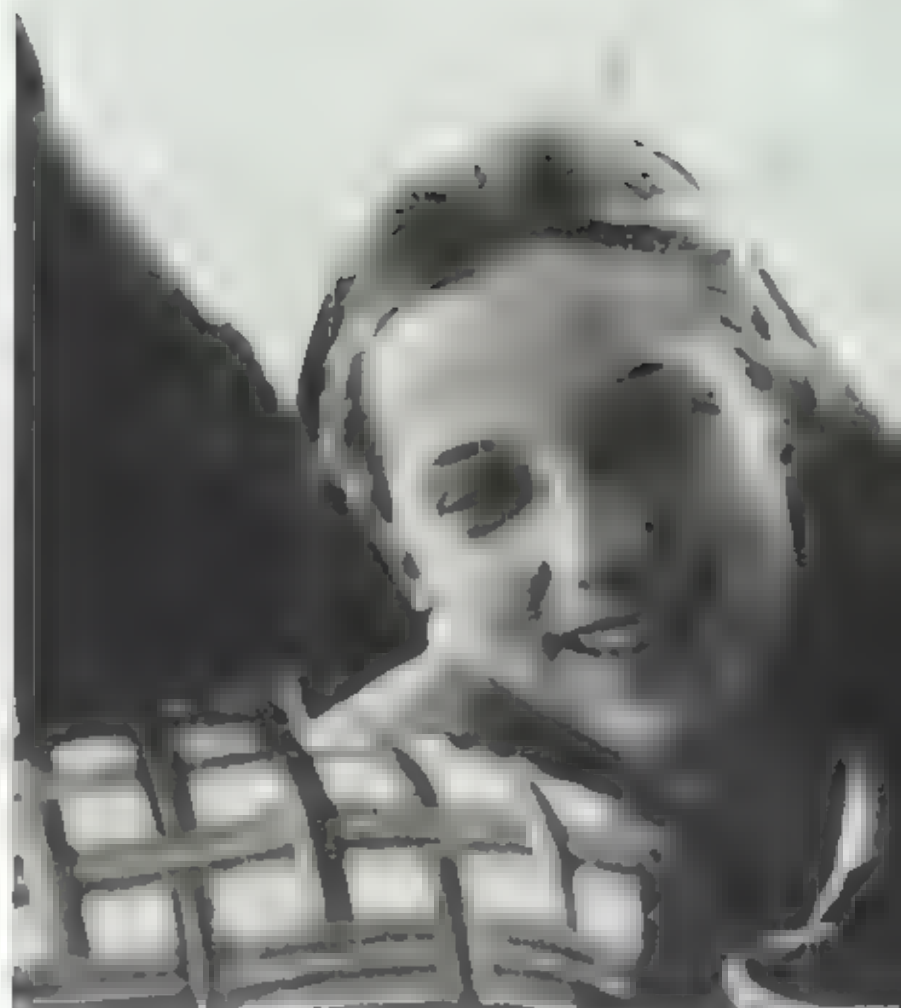

Miss Marion Sutton

Mrs. Patsy Stone

Sue Heath: This year in Calculus I've learned to take a lot of things on blind faith.

Bill Nelson: Each year mathematical notation becomes more and more complex. By the time you get to Calculus, having abandoned numbers long ago, and having run through all the letters of the Roman Greek and Cyrillic alphabets, you finally resort to weird-looking "5"s

Mathematics

Mrs. Elzer Babb

Mrs. Wanda Baker

Mr. Bill C. Johnson

Mrs. Lorraine Davenport

Mrs. Margaret Lindsay

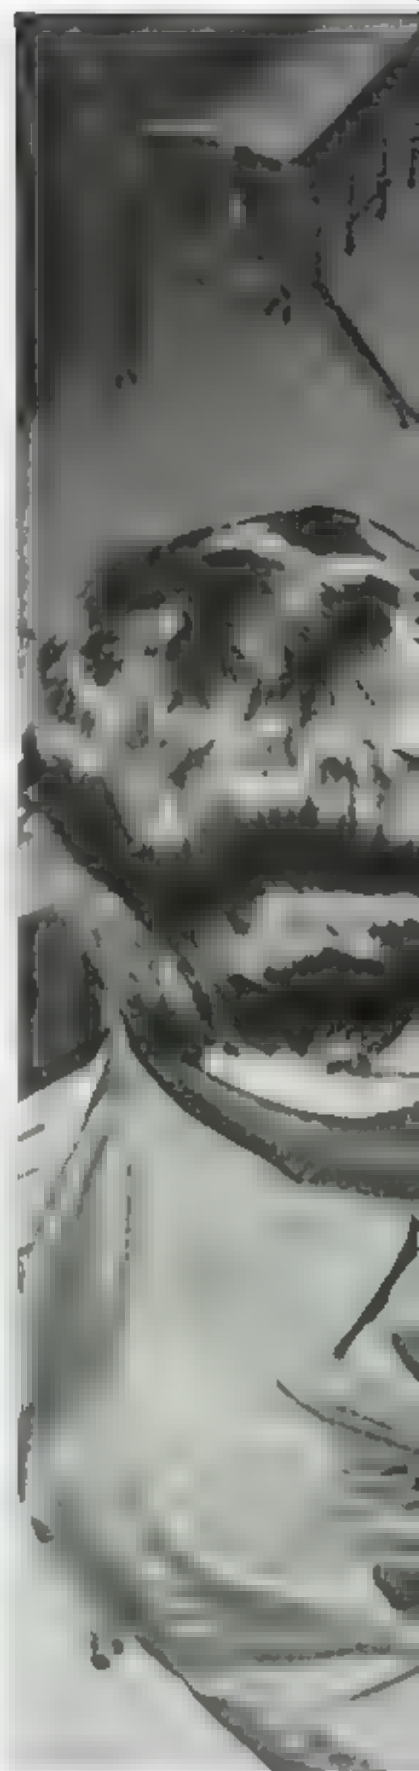

Mr. Charles Ketcham

Mrs. Linda Giles

Thomas Wilson: The most meaningful, original, and most ridiculous equation I've run across is the integral: $\int x^2 \sqrt{a^2 - x^2} dx$, which is equal to $(a/8 + x) \sin^{-1} x/8 \sqrt{a^2 - x^2} (a^2 - 2x^2) + C$. This formula comes in very handy when determining the amount of time it will take to get home after one has been to a big keg party. Just let a =how much time you've got left to get home, let x =the distance to be traveled, and let c =the number of beers you drank. The only problem is that by the time you get an answer, you're already late.

Mrs. Emma Beckwith

Mrs. Julia Stevens

Mrs. Dorothy Demby

Mrs. Virginia Kellum

Mr. Ocie Taylor

Mrs. Lillie Jones

Sue First: Chemistry by the hour is like Sominex by the bottle!

Jeff Cox: The one thing that I like about my fetal pig in Anatomy is that whenever I have a problem, I can go to him and talk it out man to pig

Bill Nelson: Who can bear to listen to all that Newtonian heresy in Physics? Long live Aristotle!

Dr. Claire Freeman

Miss Evelyn Herman

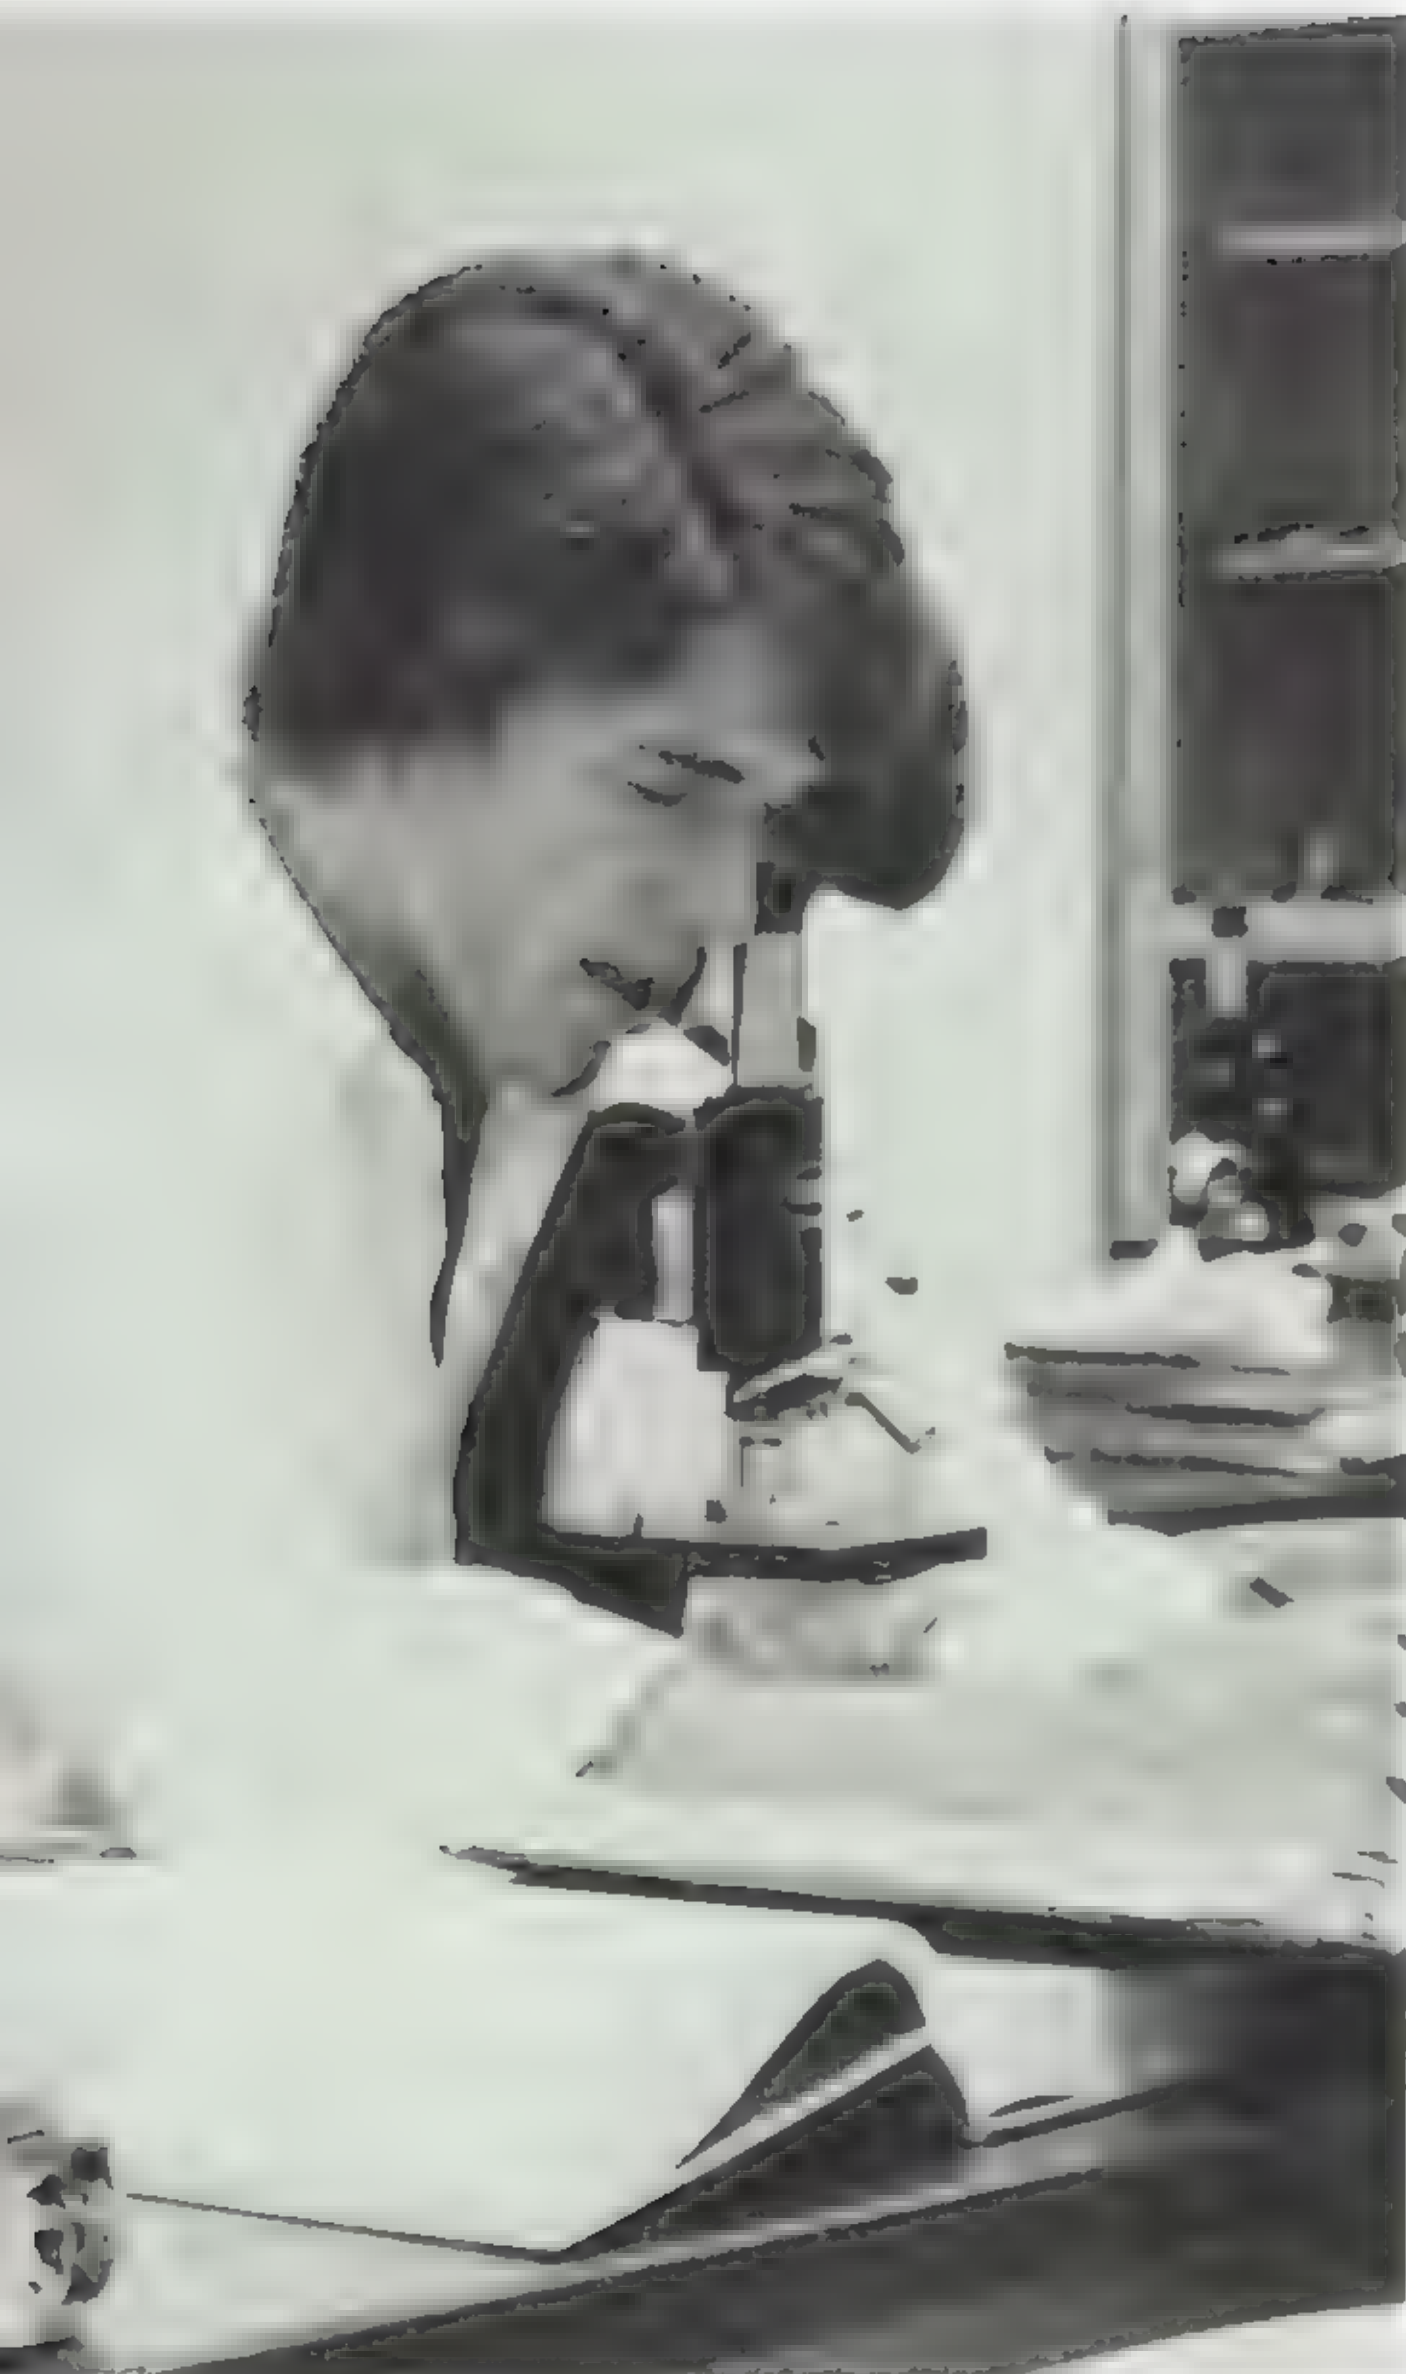

Mrs. Margaret McKay

Mr. Allan Cunn

Mr. Howell Stoup

Ann Cameron: I registered to vote as soon as I turned 18 so I could start doing something about our school board!

Linda Ritzen: My most boring class was APP- the course required a whole semester to teach me what I had learned in 2 weeks when I was in junior high!

Sarah Sharp: By the time I am through with APP, I will be able to overthrow the government successfully

Paul Crutchfield: Ten years from now I won't care who controlled the Byzantine Empire back when they ate raw meat!

Tony Brannock: I've always thought that social studies was a course that you slept through. In Mr. Goodwin's class, sleeping doesn't even enter your mind because he makes you feel the need and responsibility to become involved!

Mr. Tim West

Bill Nelson: In order to be a good disciple of Nietzsche I had to take German — the language of the master race!

Thomas Wilson: I'm taking Spanish because I'd like to go to France someday, and since the French don't like Americans, I'm going to fool them with what little bit of Spanish I've learned

Stan Webster: "Il faut bien que je supporte deux ou trois chenilles si je veux connaître les papillons." You need to endure two or three caterpillars if you ever want to know butterflies.

Rajiv Pandyo: For two years, I have thought that French is the most monotonous language. And yet I have signed up for it next year. For some strange reason I just can't let it go even though I feel such an aversion to it. C'est la vie!

Khalid Mustafa: Gym would be okay if the sophomores would learn to shower! What a smell!

John Corey: Gym is the great melting pot of the school curriculum where one is forced to mix with lower life forms

Liz Ekwall: I don't mind having to take gym, but I do mind not having a choice of what I take Tris Merino: In drafting we learn the finer aspects of drawing. However, at the drafting room window, we observe the finer aspects of some of Sanderson's best student bodies.

Vocational Education

Gerry Nechvatal: The part I like best about E & E II is Tall Tale Hour. That's when Mr. Becken tells us Navy stories.

Janine Nunnally: Home Economics teaches you a range of subjects from cooking to childcare

James Smith: This year I learned a lot of things in Mrs. Richardson's Home Ec class that I never thought I would be able to do. I made a pullover shirt that was really marvelous

Brenda Parker: I took Interpersonal Relationships hoping to learn a lot about different people and why they do the things they do. I'm not a psychiatrist yet but I've definitely learned a lot Michelle Myers: This year we had a great teacher who laughed, cried, and got mad at us and with us. She's all the music department needs at Sanderson from now on. Mrs. Jayne Wilkins has patience, love, and understanding, and occasionally frustration. She's the best!

Richard Ritz: Many students don't know Sanderson has one of the finest band programs in N.C. The Orchestra, Wind Ensemble and Concert Band have upheld the excellence of Sanderson. Also, the Marching Band treated the Friday night football crowd to a show of great talent and hard work.

Driver's Education

Mr. Charles Lehning

Mr. Albert Johnson

Paige Clark: It is unfair to make first time drivers go on Shelley Road. Every time a car passed, I nearly wrecked

John Watson: One thing I mastered in driver's ed was the "rough stop." The more my instructor talked about his bad back, the worse my stops became

Kathy Copeland: I still haven't figured out why 14 year olds get priority over 15½ year olds

Tom Baron: This girl that was in my driver's ed car got in the driver's seat and drove off. About a mile down the road she realized that the emergency brake was on, so she reached down and pulled the hood up. "Wham!" Needless to say she didn't pass the course

Sue Heath: The one department at Sanderson which really needs help is the guidance department; too many of Sanderson's counselors take the attitude that they are doing you a favor when they perform duties (such as sending off college transcripts) that are part of their job. They don't seem to realize that they can ruin a person's college plans and possibly his whole career when they continually "forget" to send off transcripts or to distribute scholarship information. I believe that several of SHS's counselors need to take a good hard look at their responsibilities and then either try to wholeheartedly perform them or get out of the profession

Administration

Miss Lucy Barrett

Miss Mary L. Starnes

Mrs. Ellen Peers

Mr. David S. De

Mr. Richard B. Bro

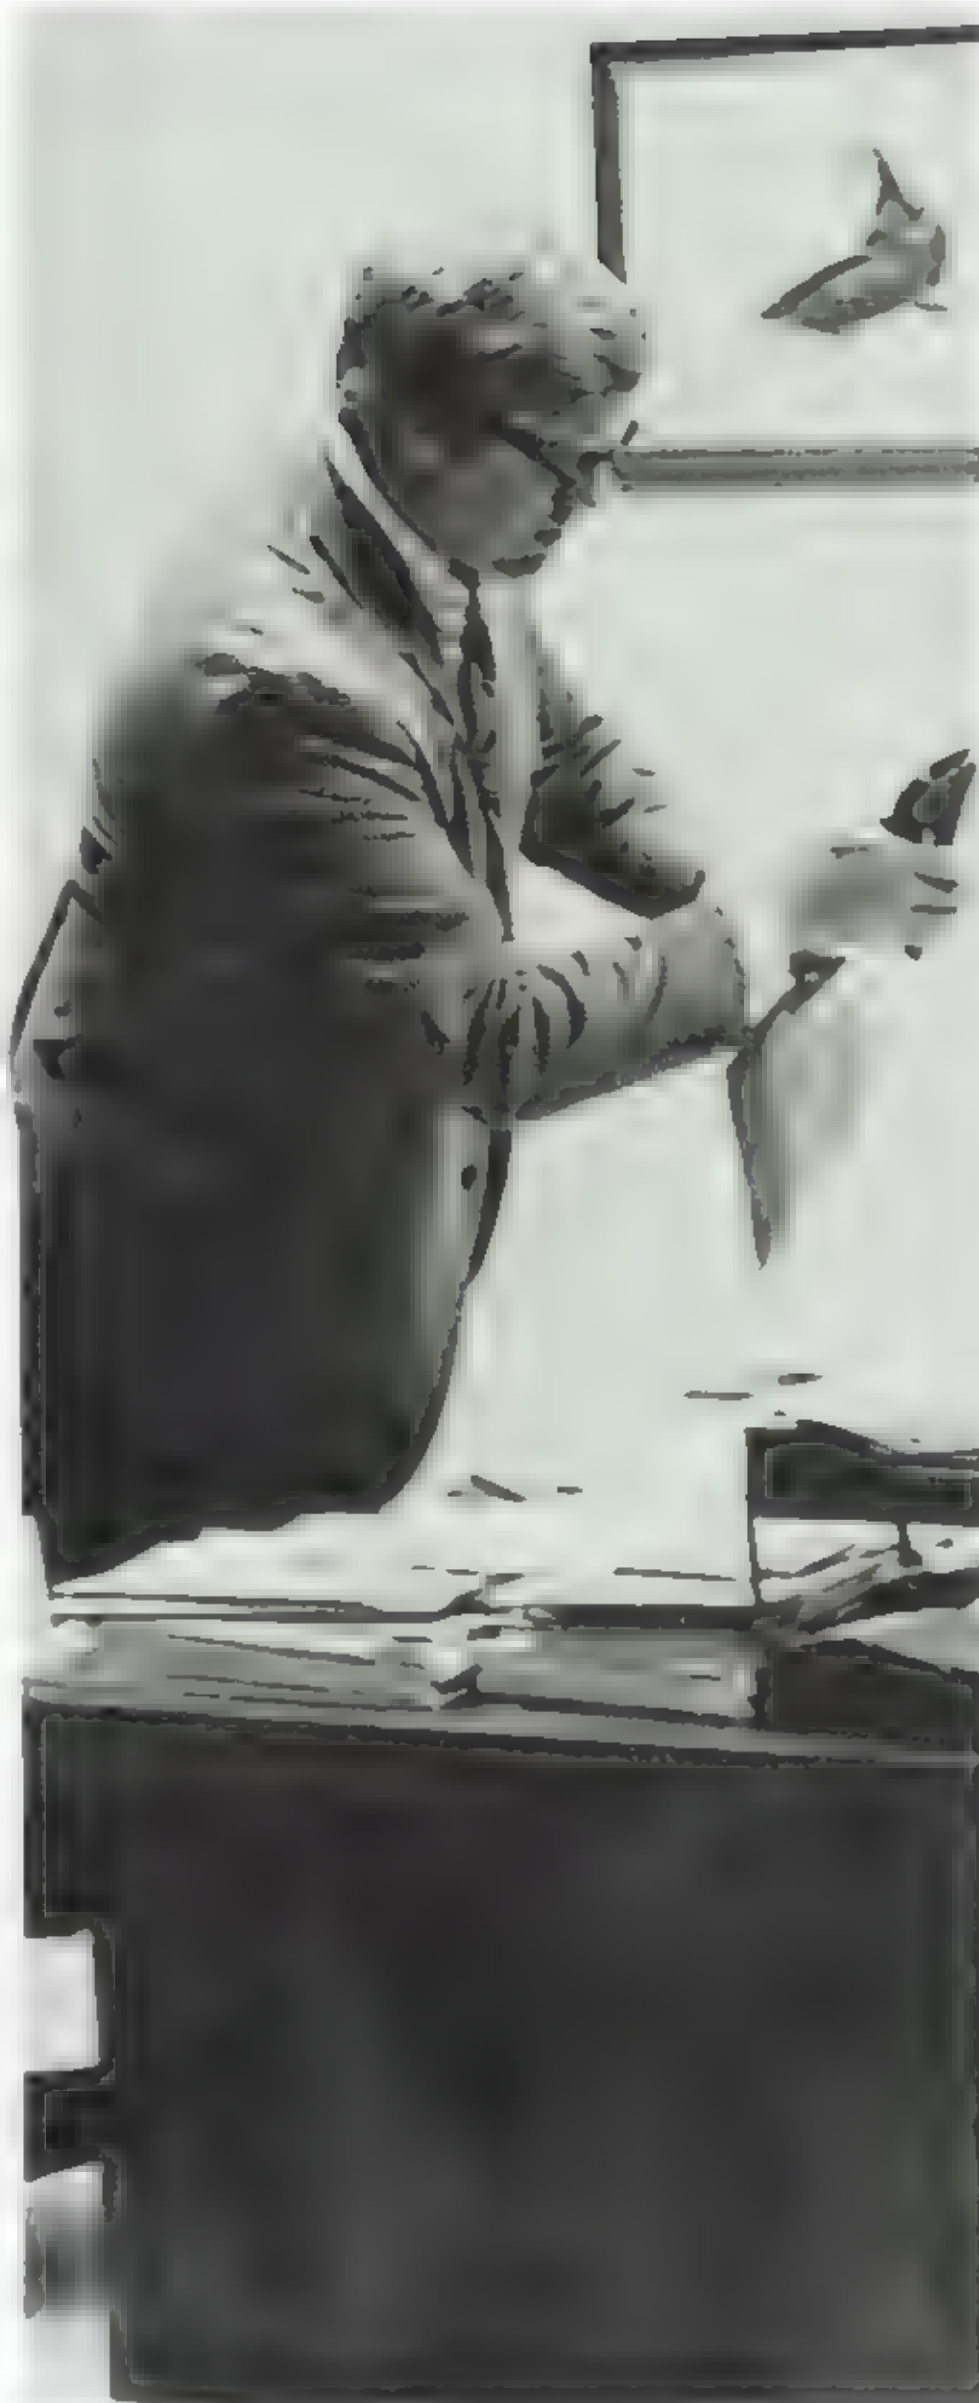

Mrs. Janet Stevens

Tracy Halleman: This year really opened up my eyes about the administration I've seen Mr. Bragg give a million cheerful smiles, try to deal with an unruly executive council and go out of his way to do any thing (within reason, of course!) for anybody. I've also seen the incredible things Mr. Murray does that no one ever notices. Even though he's not very "visible," he does an awful lot for the students of SHS. At first I thought that they had gotten more in touch with student needs, but working with them has made me realize that they didn't decide all of a sudden to be on the students' side, they always have been; I just hadn't been in a position to appreciate it before.

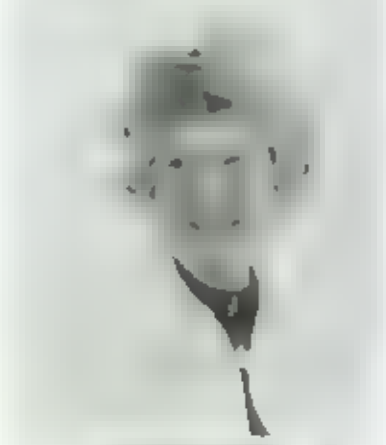

David Bass: Of course the administration is criticized, it's only natural to criticize anyone with more power than you have.

IN RETROSPECT

HAPPY VALENTINE'S DAY

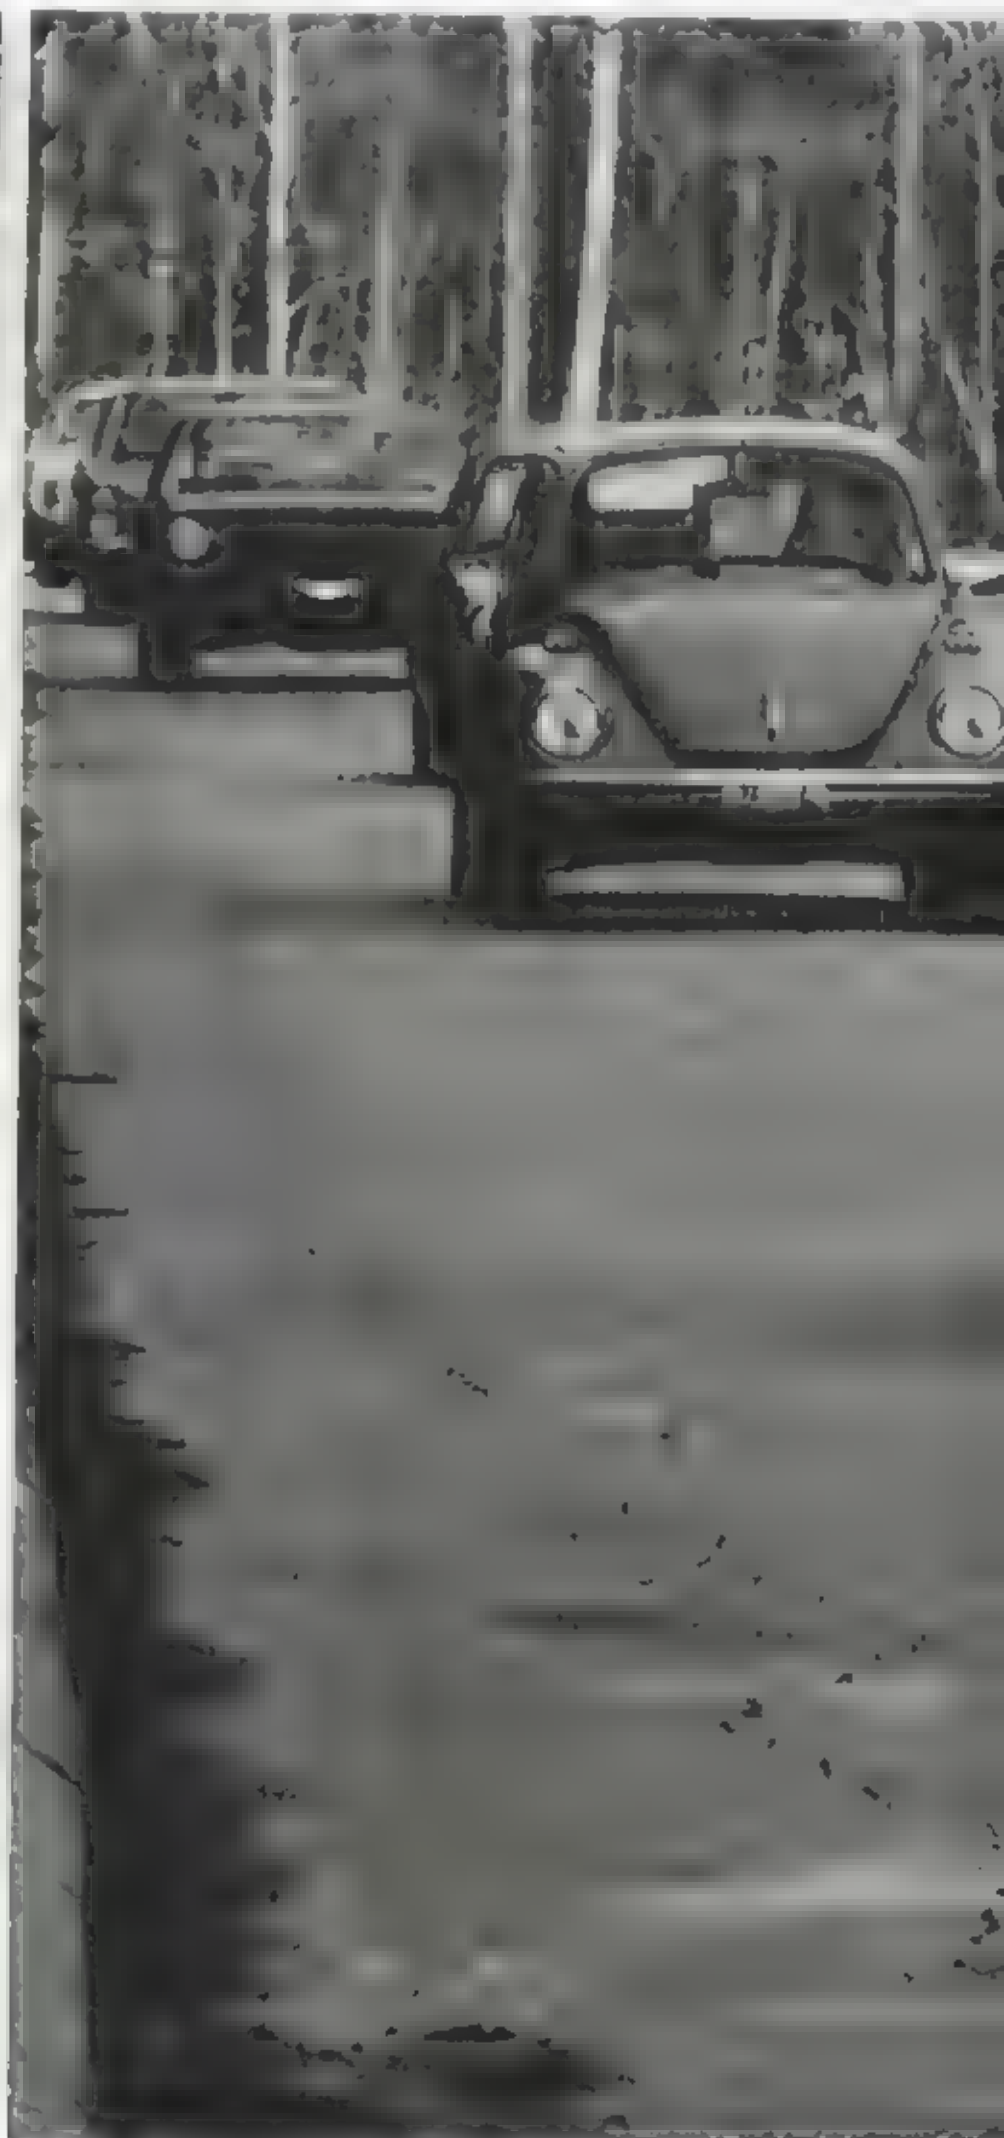

School Spirit Day was held during Sanderson's tenth year in operation. School papers, songs, and poems were sent, and at long last both a school song and words to the school fight song were created. Assemblies were held nearly every month, and for the first time in years the complete student body attended each assembly. Happy tenth birthday, Sanderson!

Despite the fact that 68% of the student body was new this year as a result of city-county merger, school quickly settled into its normal routine. The sophomores and the upperclassmen unfortunate enough not to own their own "wheels" passively packed into buses to reach Sanderson while other students patiently endured "speed bumps" and the long lines which characterized Sanderson's renowned "floating drugstore" every day at 7:59 and at 2:31

This year Sanderson's marching band could only be described as superb. As a result of grueling 7:00 a.m. practices and the adoption of corps style marching — complete with flags and rifles — the band consistently put on shows that could not be matched by any area high school band.

Homecoming Week started off with a bang as the powderpuff game was restored to the traditional clash between seniors and underclassmen. Although there were no serious injuries this year, the game was certainly no less violent or controversial than usual. Due to a misunderstanding between the referees and the seniors as to kickoff rules, the underclassmen scored the first touchdown of the game in a somewhat questionable manner. Five minutes somehow 'erased' from the clock during the second half also contributed to the underclass victory.

The powderpuff game also gave Sanderson's males an opportunity to safely act out some of their more bizarre secret desires in a socially acceptable manner (Klinger would be proud of you boys!).

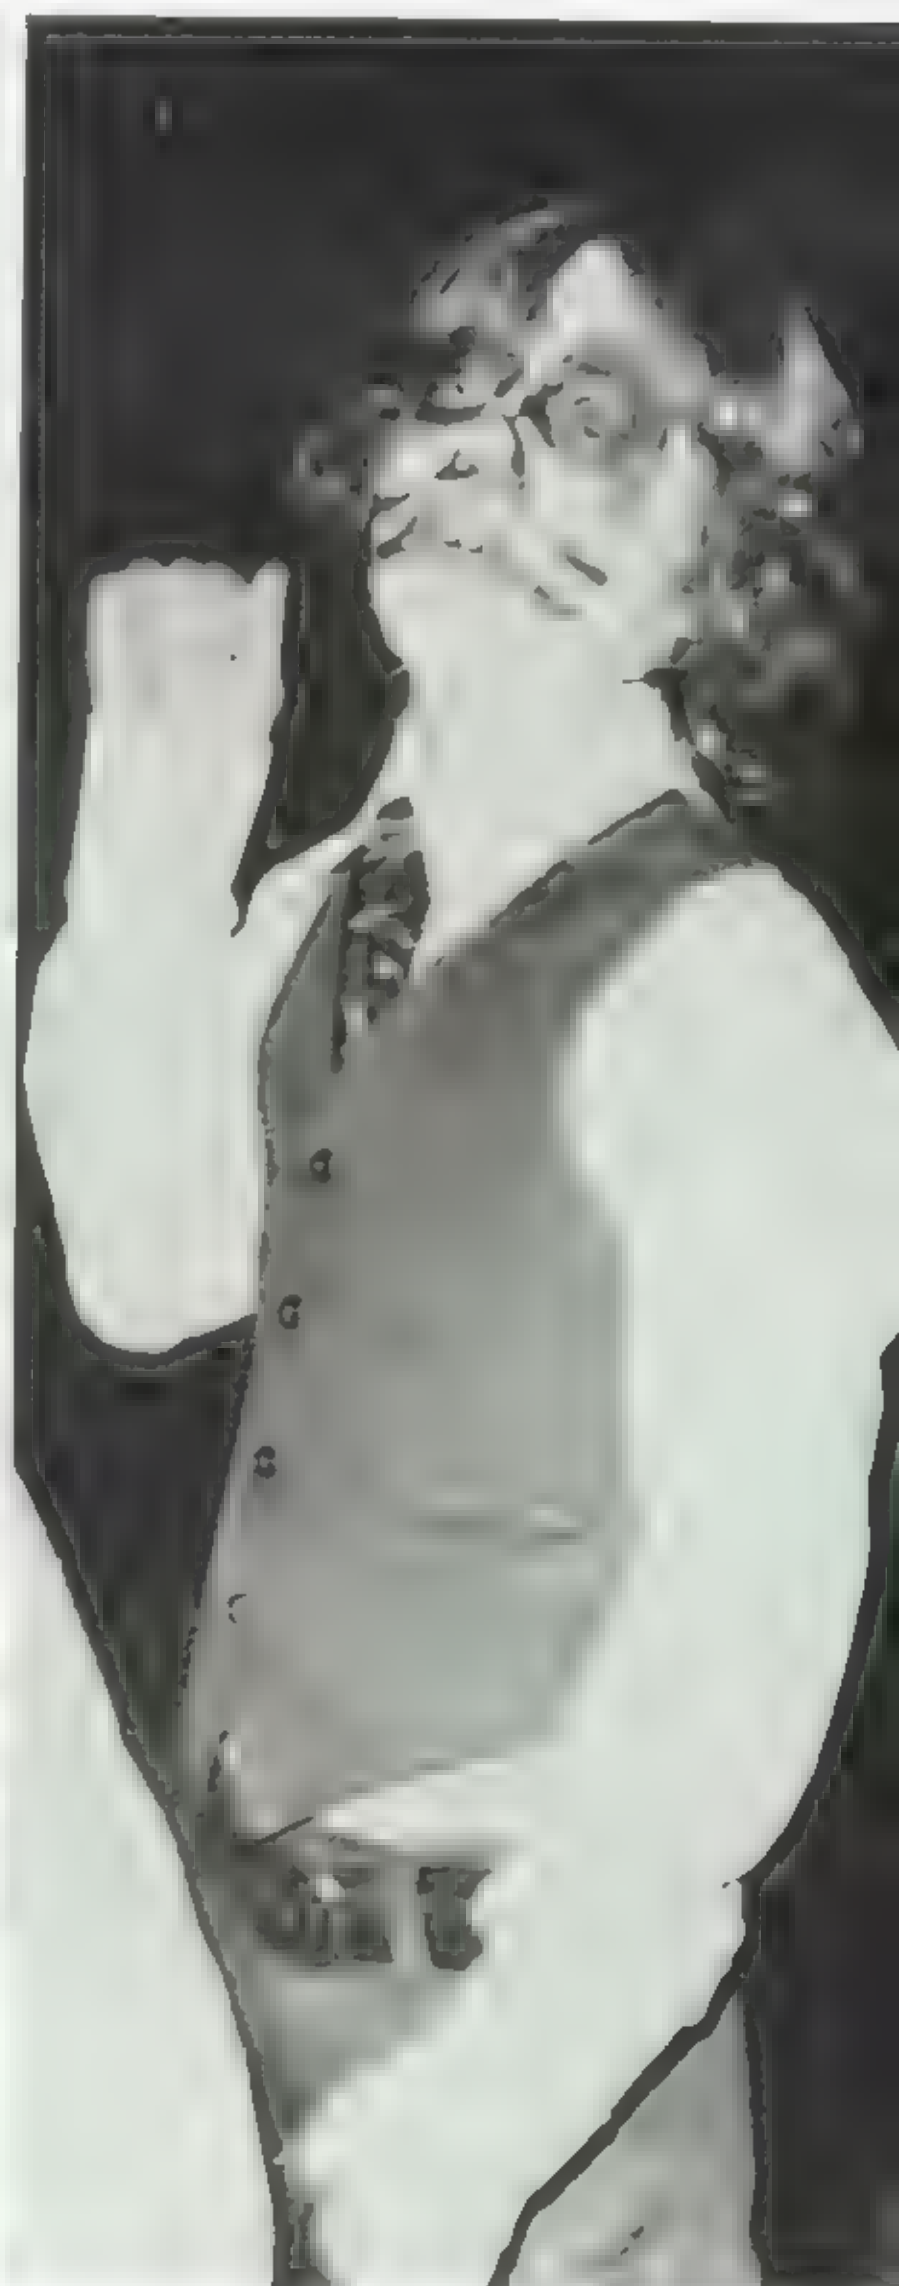

Homecoming Week came to an exciting and satifying close as Sanders in whipped cream. Even a band that played nearly "undanceable" music could not spoil the evening.

Through various skits and gimmicks, the cheerleaders and sports committee attempted to instill some spirit in the students during the so called "pep" rallies. Although their efforts were sometimes successful, most students were either totally disinterested in their antics or were still in such a daze at 8:00 a.m. that they could hardly muster the energy to yawn.

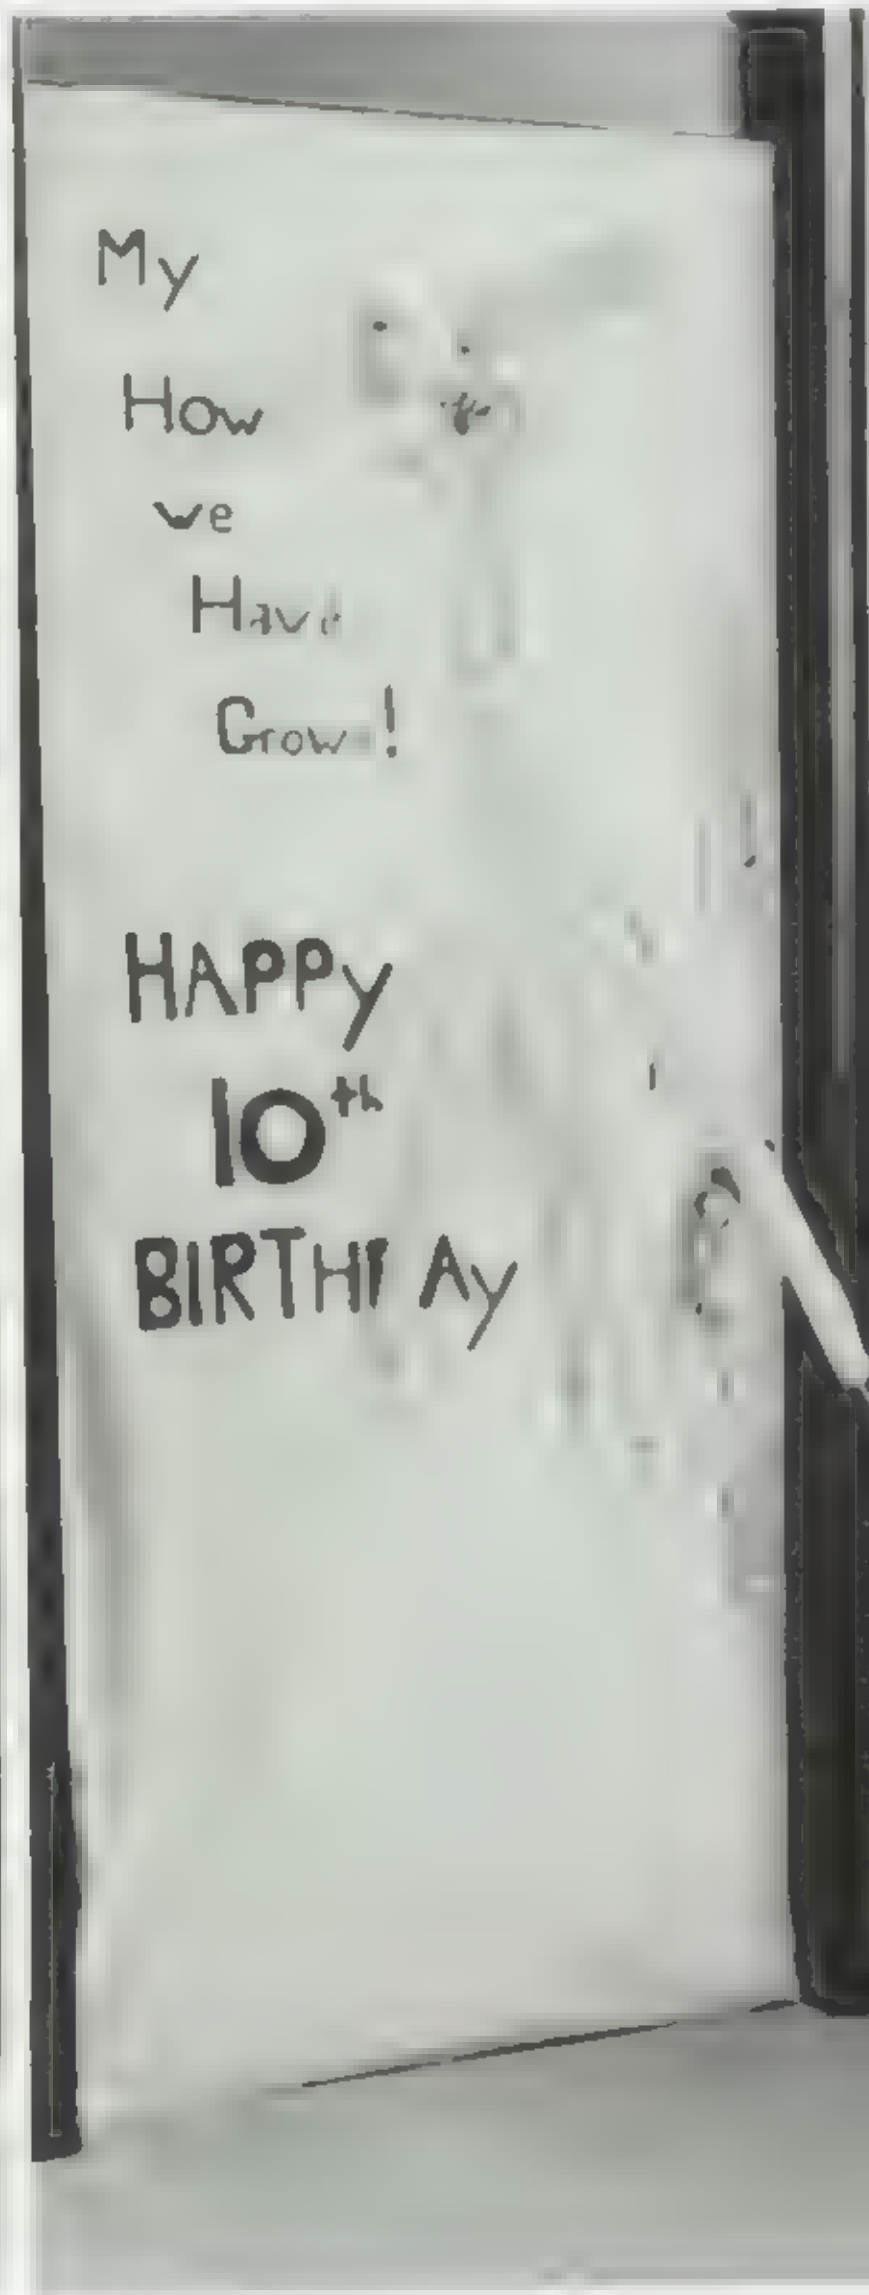

Too old for trick-or-treating, Sanderson students had to satisfy their wilder urges by dressing up for the Masquerade dance. The fantastic costumes worn at the dance prove that we still enjoy acting like eight year olds no matter how sophisticated we believe ourselves to be.

The marching band was not the only musical group at Sanderson to improve vastly this year. The excellent quality of the other instrumental groups was shown both by the many "superior" ratings they received in competition and by the fact that 43 students were selected for All-State Band or All-State Orchestra.

The choral groups reached new heights under the enthusiastic leadership of Mrs. Wilkins. Besides performing at such various events as the Christmas assembly and the Latin Club banquet, the choral groups gave a spring concert including songs and skits from Broadway musicals.

"Happy Birthday Sanderson" was the theme for American Education week as students and faculty celebrated Sanderson's tenth year in operation as the best high school in Raleigh. As the aspiring artists at Sanderson magically transformed the dull, black doors into colorful birthday cards.

the party-loving masses celebrated with a carnival and the ever-present barbeque dinner.

For after-dinner entertainment, the Junior Class Council sponsored a Gong Show, allowing Sanderson's singers and actors a chance to show their stuff.

Eat your heart out, Chuck Barris!

The week came to a perfect close at Sanderson's Birthday assembly, the first occasion at which all 2000 students and faculty were present at one time. After saluting the teachers who have taught at Sanderson since it opened, we rolled in our seats at Mr. Murray's surprisingly humorous speech on the first year at Sanderson. Student body unity was never so apparent as during the first rendition of the school fight song which erupted into spontaneous cheering as the crowning glory of the week — a huge birthday cake — was wheeled into the gym

Sanderson students soon crowded into the gym for yet another assembly, this time in celebration of Christmas. After hearing the angelic voices of the various choral groups and listening to student letters to Santa Claus we had candy thrown to us by racially balanced Santa Clauses portrayed by Mr. Bragg and Mr. Alston (HEW would have been pleased!)

As the time of the Winter Festival dance neared, Sanderson's female population rushed to find both dates and gowns for the occasion. The dance took a more traditional turn this year as the students elected a Winter Festival Queen and Court.

After treating their dates to dinner, the girls brought them to Sanderson to a theme of "A Christmas Carol" and to music provided by one of the best bands we have had in a long time.

Students with transportation patronized Wendy's, Arby's, MacDonalds, and other fast food restaurants . . .

but those left at Sanderson fared much better this year. Under the able leadership of Mrs. Dot Reilly, who introduced such innovations as a salad bar, the cafeteria almost became a respectable eating place.

Students who could not eat their fill at lunch were able to satisfy their hunger pangs at the Language Club Food-Tasting, where such delicacies as manicotti and French pastry were served.

Sanderson abandoned the traditional candy sale this year for the more lucrative sale of magazine subscriptions. Although the sale had to be extended because it was interrupted by the closing of school due to . . .

snow, nobody seemed to mind (at least not until most of our spring break was cancelled to make up the snow days.)

Prizes such as Sanderson pens . . .

and mugs helped to spur sales.

Students relaxed
after mid-term exams . . .

by participating in the sale of Valentínograms. For a small fee, you could send your love a rose, a valentine and a song

brought to him or her by the Sandpipers and a troupe of Cupids (complete with bow and arrows).

A Valentine's Day dance brought the fun to a satisfying close

Sanderson students demonstrated their courage, altruism, and/or naivete by willingly subjecting themselves to the needle in order to donate a pint of blood to the Red Cross (perhaps the crowds of donors just proved students will go to any length to miss class).

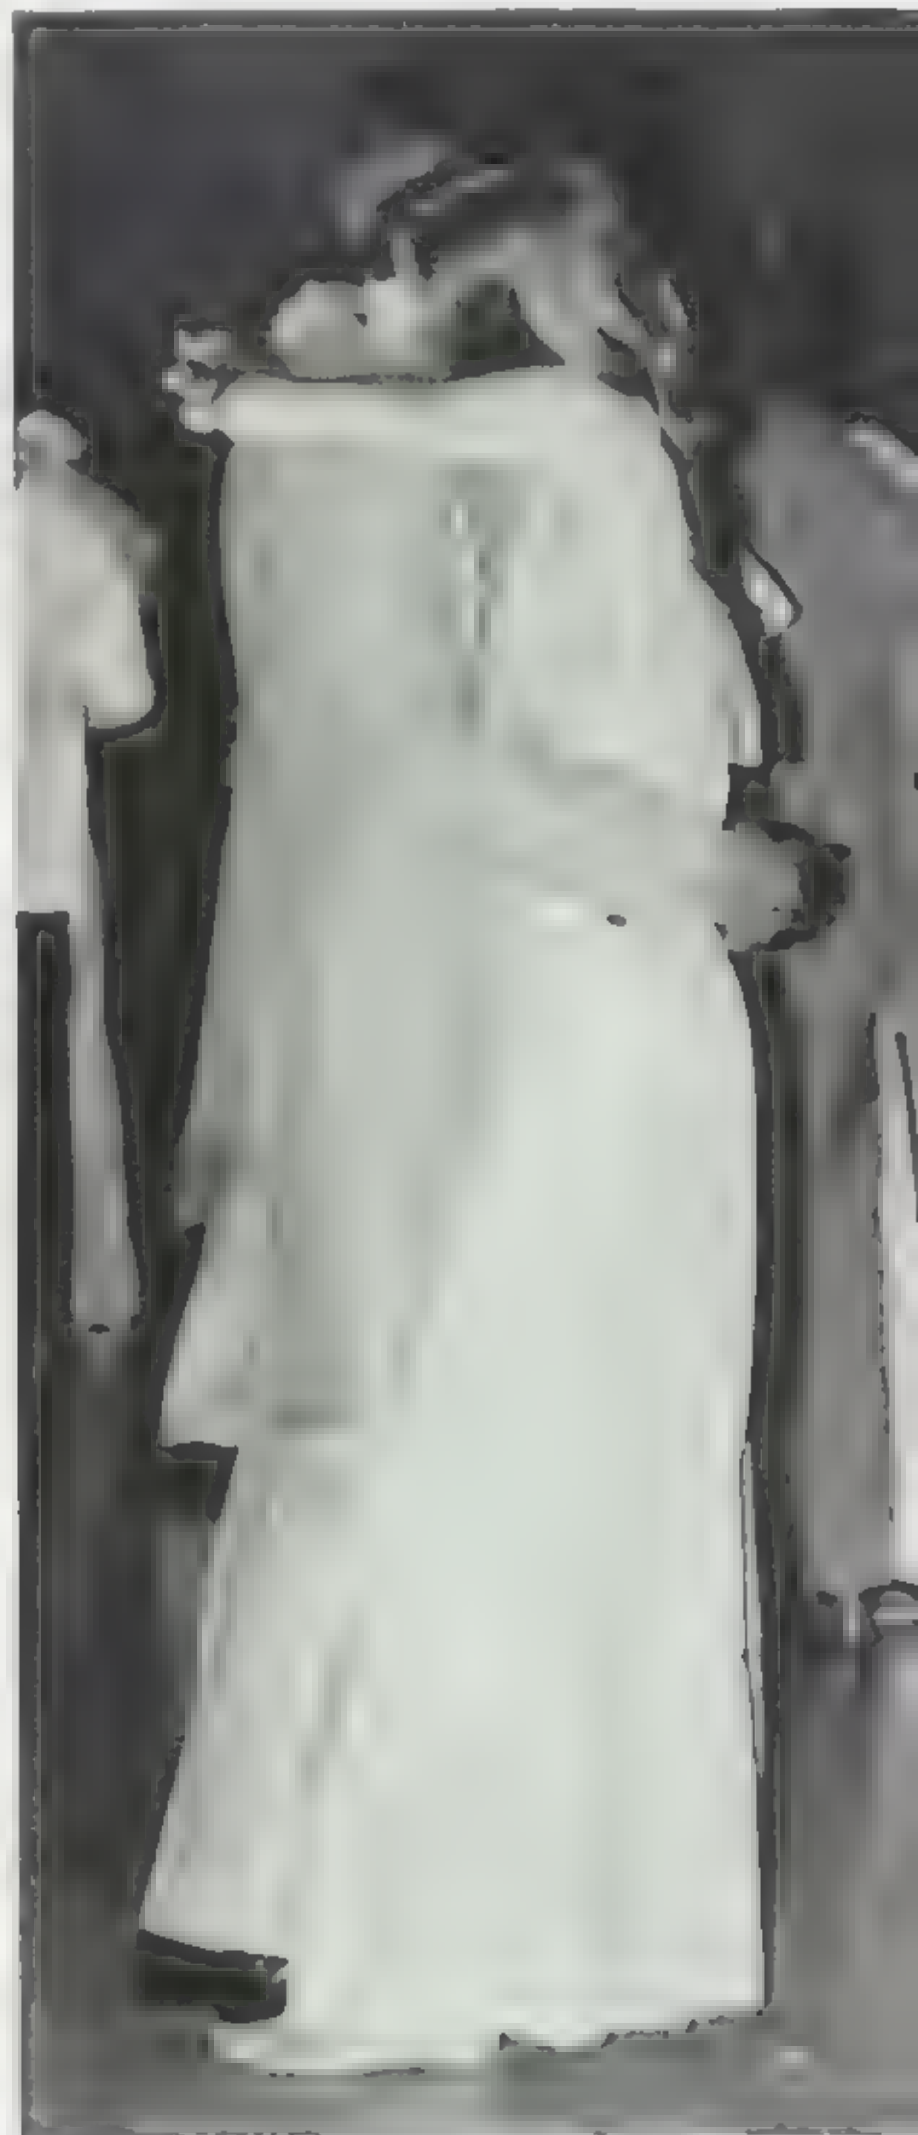

Because the Trash Bashes invariably leave the school grounds dirtier after the event than before, this year the House and Grounds Committee abandoned the Bash in place of a Tree Spree. Despite torrential downpours which delayed the planting of the newly purchased trees and shrubs, the Spree was a huge success, raising over $300.

Some classes did anything to get money (including sermons from Kerm (the frog demanding money for the "Tree God").

Despite last-minute changes in the Prom caused by the removal of a teacher workday, the Junior Class, with a theme of "Crystal Gossoms," still managed to put on a good prom. Held at and catered by the new Raleigh Civic Center, the Prom was a huge success (as proven by the fact that the juniors actually made money on the dance).

Although the purpose of the Donkey Basketball games was to pit student against teacher . . .

the true contest was between the student or teacher and the donkey. The donkeys (and, superficially, the students) came out on top.

Those unable or unwilling actually to play in the games could display their talents as cheerleaders or clowns (alas the "clean-up committee")

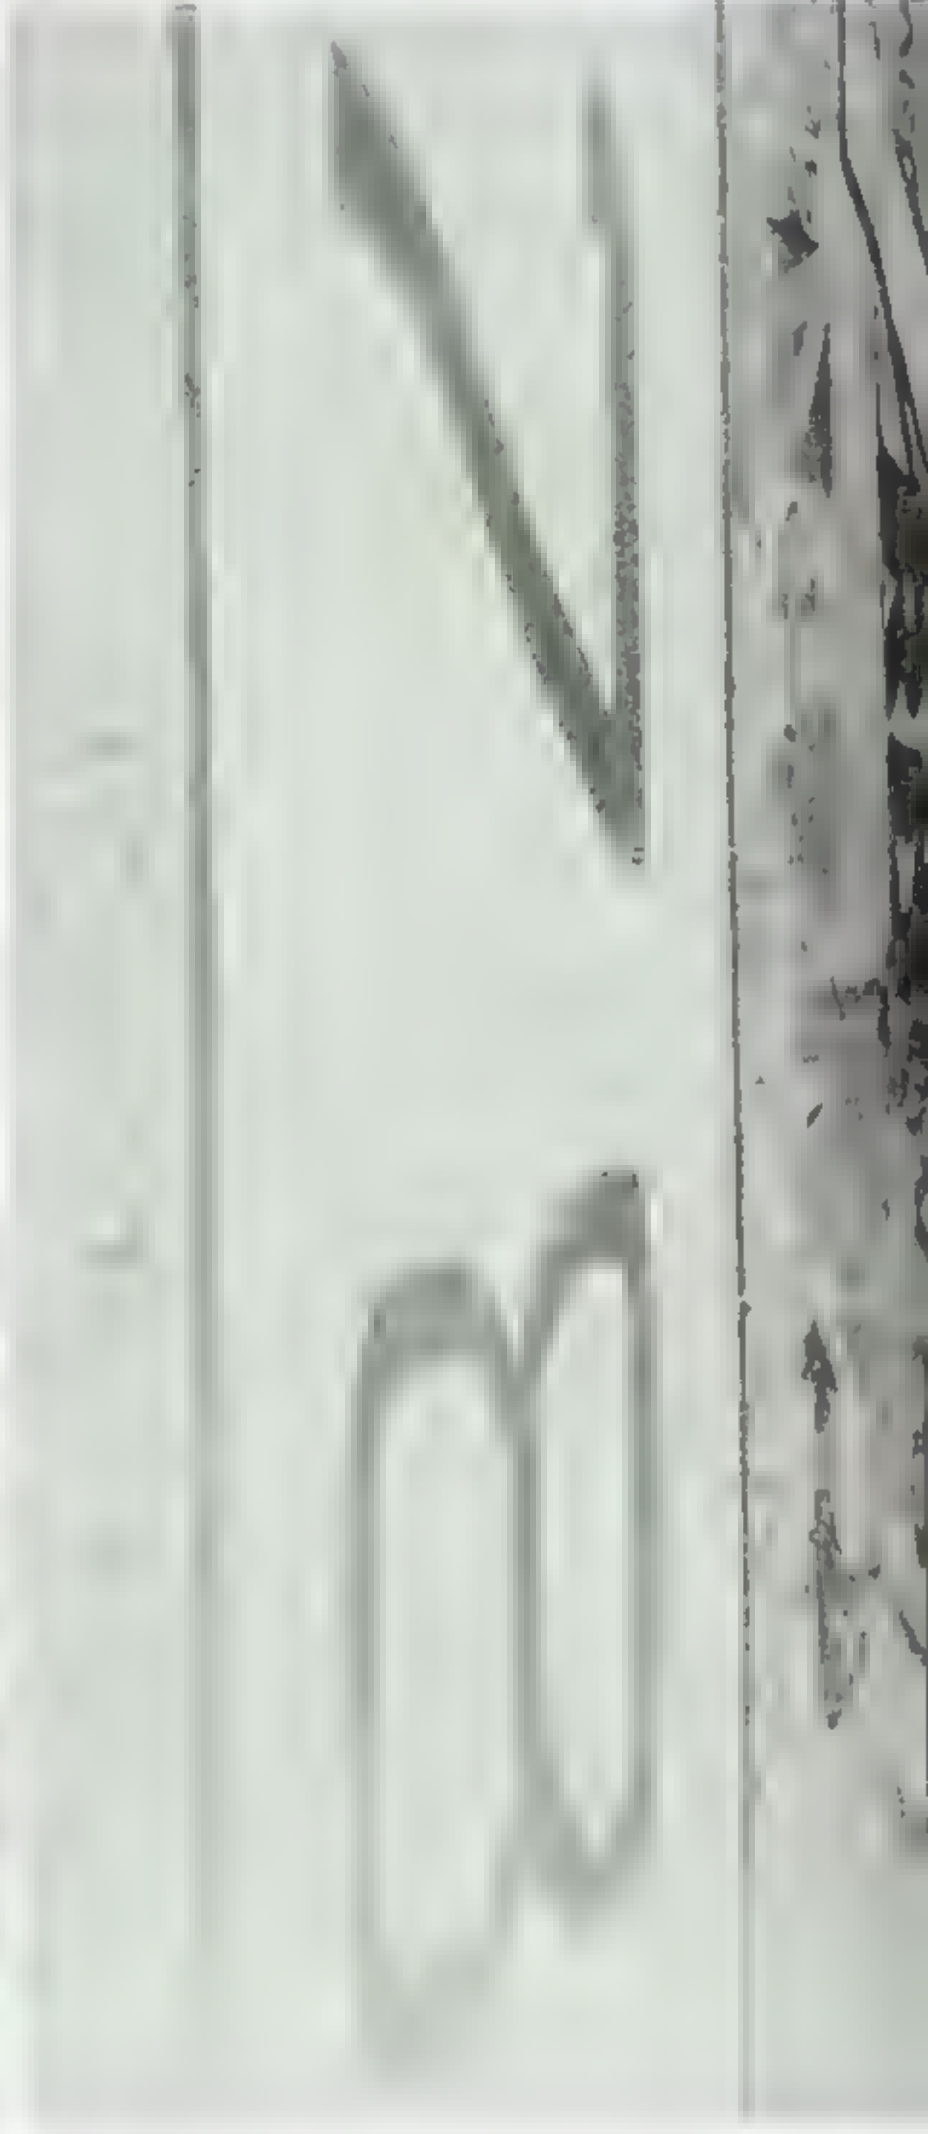

Although the Latins assumed an early lead, the Germans reasserted their superiority by eventually winning the annual Language Olympics (followed by the Latins, the Spanish, and the French).

While the Safety Committee legally painted lines in the parking lot the juniors and seniors illegally waged a continuing battle for supremacy of the sidewalk. After one junior painting spree resulted in a 3:00 a.m. trip downtown for the lucky artist, a certain senior found it necessary to give up part of her senior beach weekend to rectify the "mistake" (in broad daylight on a Saturday afternoon, yet!). The Seniors prove their superiority again!

Nervously waiting in the halls for the baccalaureate ceremonies to begin, we realized that the final week had at last truly begun. We solemnly and sedately took our seats in the Civic Center to listen to U.S. Senator Robert Morgan extol us on the virtues of living in America. When the ceremony ended, we began our week of celebration with pig-pickin's and ice cream parties

On Tuesday evening we attended a Class Night ceremony which turned out to be a waste of time, as the skits were juvenile, ill-prepared, and virtually unintelligible

Wednesday's events included the Senior Assembly and a Senior Picnic which was successfully conducted in the stadium despite impending rain.

Thursday finally arrived, and as we straightened our caps for one last time while waiting for the ceremony to begin, we realized that this was it! (at last!)

Concentrating on stepping on the right X and trying not to trip up the seemingly 80" ramp, we were totally oblivious to the crowd as we finally stepped forward to get that small piece of paper which represented the culmination of twelve long years of struggle. As we returned to our seats, we finally realized that WE MADE IT!

into his factory and threw it against the wall. Besides such fielding exercises as the Powder-puff game and the under-armor swim and compact games the magazine also was full of sports and a new form of competition arose. Street Wars. The sports of seniors were a thing of the past and a thing of the future for supremacy of the sidewalk.

I was strolling down the hall when nature called and I exited to a very nicely partitioned bathroom. I took care of my "business" and left without ever thinking of the newly styled boys room. A couple of days later I was walking down the hall and looked above the door of the bathroom I had used before. When I read the sign above the door, I was the most embarrassed person in the world! Jeff Conyers: Senioritis is being able to flunk your classes with an excuse.

Janet Hamilton: I would advise sophomores to get involved in as many activities as possible. Involvement makes school much more interesting because you can meet a lot of people and really enjoy yourself.

SENIORS

Beth Jayne: I never thought that being a senior would be much of a big deal, but now that I am one it's everything it's cracked up to be. Being a senior is great because of all the privileges we get and how all the little underclassmen look up to us; how they wish they could be seniors!

Susan DeBrunner: My attitude towards the underclassmen? I once heard the definition of a sophomore — "he who reads much and understands little." To modify the definition for a Sanderson sophomore, it would read as "he who reads little and understands less."

Melissa Ussery: Senioritis is an overdose of education, nostalgia, and college applications.

Tracy Halleman: Looking back on my senior year, I realize that it's not events or places or facts that I remember; it's people; people have made the events worth remembering. The people that I've gotten to know at Sanderson — insane, whacky, funny, serious, intelligent, goofy, CARING, people — have made my years here very special, and I know that as I leave, I take a little bit of all of them with me.

Timothy Rayburn Morrison
June 13, 1960 — July 10, 1978

The more complete one's life is, the more . . . one's creative capacities are fulfilled, the less one fears death . . . People are not afraid of death per se, but of the incompleteness of their lives." — Lisl Goodman
We liked Tim Morrison, we respected Tim Morrison, we loved Tim Morrison for his joy, his courage, his kindness, for the completeness of his life.

LAKONIKOS

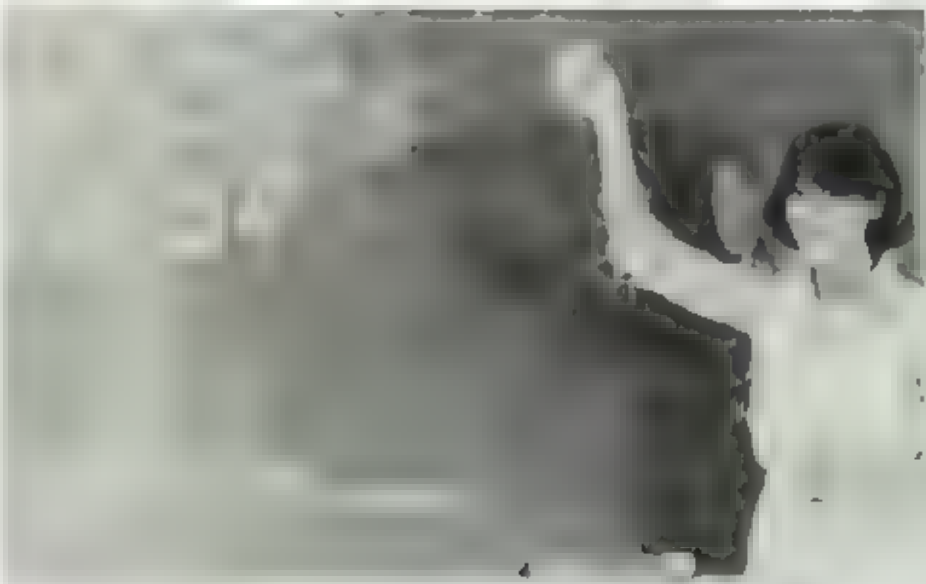

My Dearest Roy,

You remind me of the sweet dew-drops falling off the damp grass, while the sun shines through the gloomy rays of the crepuscular glow of the morning sun. How do I love thee? Let me count the ways. I love the way your golden locks flow with the subtle winds blowing with my love for you. I love your tender carressing lavender lips. You drive me to ecstasy with your tantalizing kisses. You make me quiver with excitement. You make me feel like a total woman. Without you my life would be incomplete. I would lose my yearn for survival. Just as the robin sings his sweet lullaby to the new awakening spring mornings, my mind wanders to the thoughts of our last rendezvous. Just remember my darling, if the sun refused to shine and the mountains crumbled to the sea. I would still be loving you. YOU ARE FOREVER ON MY MIND!!

With all my love,

A MATTER OF MONEY

As the 2000 election drew to a close, the pickup's sales and service network, which includes the networks of various Kwik Fill stations, had not yet been set up. Most of the time, the sales and service network is set up by the time the pickup is delivered. But in this case, the pickup was delivered before the network was set up. The pickup was delivered to the store, but the network was not set up. The pickup was delivered to the store, but the network was not set up. The pickup was delivered to the store, but the network was not set up.

Tenth Year

At the beginning of the school year in the fall of 1968, Sanderson still did not exist as a school. The students of Broughton who were assigned to the not-yet-completed school thus had to be crammed into the gyms and trailers of Broughton to await Sanderson's completion. Conditions for these students were unimaginable — seniors were crammed four to a half locker; sophomores, six. Each morning the students suffered through twenty minutes of announcements — first those for Broughton, then those for Sanderson. These abominable conditions finally ceased in November when the Spartans were able to enter their new school at last. Despite their less than magnificent beginnings, however, the Spartans had a terrific first year. Their football team defeated the Broughton Caps, as did their basketball team. The Spartans also managed to put on a Winter Festival Dance (complete with court and queen), candy and barbeque sales, Junior-Senior Olympics, Language banquets, the Junior-Senior prom, and a Fine Arts week. Not such a bad beginning, after all!

The year 1969-70 marked the first full year for Sanderson as a school. Sanderson held its first Homecoming this year, complete with Homecoming Court, floats, and a Homecoming Dance. To top off the excitement of the first Homecoming, Sanderson won their first homecoming game by defeating their arch-rival Broughton by a score of 15-14!

A second important event in the lives of the Spartans this year was the abolition of the dress code. Until 1969 a dress code existed which controlled the length of students' and teachers' hair and which stated, among other provisions, that girls could not wear pants and boys could not wear shorts. Teachers celebrated the demise of the dress code by wearing such outrageous clothing as headbands, psychedelic pants and shirts, and "stop at-two (children)" buttons. Sanderson's second year was far from dull.

Baubles, Barkers, & Balloons

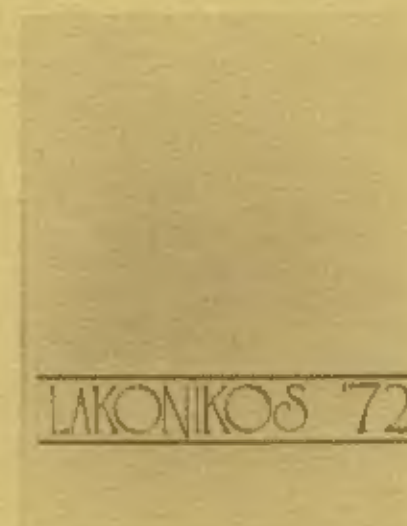

Although Sanderson had not yet advanced to the point of having girls' sports, it did field its first soccer team this year. Hardly acknowledged as a team by the school, the soccer team nevertheless ran up an impressive record of 8 wins, 0 losses, and a tie in the championship game. The winning tradition started by the first Sanderson soccer team foreshadowed the way the so-called "minor" teams at Sanderson (i.e. tennis, wrestling, track) would consistently maintain winning records.

A second great event occurring in 1971 which unfortunately has not been continued in succeeding years was the Humanities festival, an extravaganza designed to introduce students to the different areas of art, science, sports, and philosophy. Teachers, parents, and students were exposed to such various interests as yoga, billiards, and the martial arts. As the 1971 yearbook states, the students not only had fun but also "realized education is not confined to a 8:45 to 3:30 Monday through Friday curriculum but is constant; it cannot be separated from life."

The year 1971-1972 brought many changes to Sanderson. The first big change was the initiation of quota integration at the command of HEW. Such events as Black History Week and Brotherhood Week helped ease the transition and bring the races closer together. Despite some initial misgivings on both sides, the general consensus was well expressed by one student, who stated in the 1972 yearbook, "I think Sanderson is just fantastic, because being black and coming from an all-black school, I thought it would be rather hard. But I get along just fine with them. After all, why not?"

The second big change at Sanderson this year originated in the students' attitudes toward tradition. Following the attitude prevalent in America after the Viet Nam War, students became very disillusioned with such traditional events as the Winter Festival. Students showed their displeasure by actually egging the Winter Festival Queen and Court when they were presented to the school during an assembly. This drastic change of attitude would become even more apparent the next year.
